GENERAL VIEW OF THE BATTLE.

Judged by the severity of the encounter and the heavy losses we have experienced, the engagement which opened at gray dawn this morning and spent its fury in little over an hour, should take its place among the battles of the war; but viewed in its relations to the whole campaign, it is, perhaps, hardly more than a grand reconnoissance—a reconnoissance, however, which has cost us not less than five or six thousand killed and wounded.

The object of the action was to force the passage of the Chickahominy, on the north side of which, and covering the roads to Richmond, the rebels had planted themselves in a fortified line. What we have done is to feel this line by a vigorous attack, in which, though gaining some temporary successes, and at one or two points actually carrying the enemy's works, we have, on the whole, reached the conclusion that any victory that could here be won must cost too much in its purchase. I do not say this as speaking with any authority, but only as recording the general conviction of the army. Such conviction, however, when the common judgment of such men as have to-day led their lines against the enemy, is apt to be of itself authority, and hence I think I may safely predict that there will be no renewal of the assault on the lines of the Chickahominy; that we must look to the resources of strategy to plant this army in a position where, being at less of a disadvantage, its valor will have a better promise of adequate reward.

It is in this view that the action of to-day assumes to me the aspect of a great reconnoissance. But it might easily have been more. Were prudence not as much a characteristic of Lieut.-Gen. GRANT'S mind as pluck, did he not know as well how and when to cry a halt as to order an advance, he might have pushed the action from a reconnoissance to a bloody battle; but to me it is clear we should have had only another Fredericksburgh and its useless slaughter. Gen. GRANT is not so poor in resource that he need do this; and I think already his eyes are turned away from the Chickahominy to lines and combinations more bold than any yet essayed.

II.

STRATEGIC OPERATIONS FROM THE PAMUNKY TO THE CHICKAHOMINY.

To gain a clear view of the present situation, of the relations of the contending forces, and of the purposes of to-day's action, it is necessary to glance for a moment at the series of strategic operations which, after crossing the Pamunky, have drawn our lines in their present position and formation. After the passage of the river at the town of Hanover on Saturday last, our line of battle was formed almost due north and south, and our front thrown forward due west, for the purpose of again gaining a point of contact with the enemy, from whom we had for a day or two been separated by the flanking operation, which swung the army from the North Anna around and across the Pamunky. This formation was necessitated by the obligation of covering the fords and bridges over the Pamunky, by which our supplies, trains, artillery, etc., had to pass. On pushing out on Sunday and Monday we found the enemy also forming line of battle north and south, directly in front of the Virginia Central Railroad, and extending from Atlee's Station (with cavalry thrown out to Hanover Court-house,) south to Shady Grove, ten miles north of Richmond. In this position LEE covered both the Virginia Central and the Fredericksburgh and Richmond Railroads, as well as all the roads leading to Richmond, west of and including the Mechanicsville pike. This formation had been imposed upon the enemy by a similar motive that prompted the front we took up, namely: The duty of covering the lines by which his trains and material would pass in the change of front necessitated by the turning movement which compelled LEE to abandon the line of the South Anna.

No serious impression having been produced on the enemy's line by Monday's operations, the Commanding General resumed his favorite tactics of developing the left flank. This manœuvre appears to be characteristic of him, as he adopted it both at Spottsylvania and on the North Anna. The mode of executing this ingenious movement is as follows: The corps holding the extreme right of the line is, under cover of night, withdrawn behind the line of battle of the other corps, (the picket line of course being left to conceal the movement,) and carried to the extreme left of the line, where it intrenches. The next corps to the right is then withdrawn in like manner, and connects in the same way with the new left, forming a prolongation of its line. In this manner, in the course of a couple of days, a complete reversion of position of the corps has taken place: what had been the extreme right forming the extreme left, and what had been the extreme left forming the extreme right; and thus the army finds itself drawn to the left by the length of its whole line of battle—say eight or ten miles.

During Tuesday night the Sixth Corps, (WRIGHT,) which had held the right of the army, was in this way moved down the Hanover Court-house road, and on Wednesday morning, took position near Cold Harbor, on the left of the left. Here it was joined by the reinforcements, (the Eighteenth Corps with part of the Tenth,) brought by Gen. W. F. SMITH, from White House. This column had been ordered by Gen. GRANT from White House to New Cold Harbor, but by an error in the telegraph the dispatch named the point Newcastle. The mistake was corrected, but not until he had neared the latter place, so that this corps was compelled to make a fatiguing march of five and twenty miles, and arrived at Cold Harbor on the afternoon of Wednesday, just in time to take part along with the Sixth Corps, in a severe engagement that ensued. As no accurate account of this affair has yet been given, a brief sketch of it will not be out of place.

III.

WEDNESDAY'S FIGHT AT COLD HARBOR.

I have already mentioned that the Cavalry Divisions of GREGG and TORBETT had been placed so as to cover the left of our line, held by WARREN, from whose corps they were separated by an interval of four miles. On Tuesday evening they met the rebel cavalry near Cold Harbor, and whipped them most completely.

On the following morning (Wednesday) they renewed the fight, once more punished the rebels severely, but presently found out that the enemy had, during the night, brought up strong infantry supports, so that SHERIDAN was compelled to await the arrival of WRIGHT and SMITH, then on their way up.

While writing of this affair, I have chanced to receive a copy of yesterday's Richmond Inquirer, (Thursday, June 2,) and find in it an account of Wednesday's cavalry affair. It is as follows:

"About 3:30 A. M., yesterday, artillery was opened upon the enemy on the Chickahominy, and by 8 o'clock heavy skirmishing occurred along a considerable portion of the lines. HOKE'S division commenced an advance at an early hour for a position near Cold Harbor, when it was met and attacked by a largely superior force of the enemy. The division sustained itself against the shock which ensued, but was compelled to fall back. McLAWS' division coming to HOKE'S support joined in the fray, when HOKE returned to the conflict and drove the enemy back a distance of a mile and a half, capturing some 200 prisoners and otherwise severely punishing his forces. Other portions of LONGSTREET'S corps were engaged. The battle raged hotly for several hours, quieted down somewhat between 10 and 11 o'clock, and closed about 1 o'clock."

Now, what is amusing in this recital is, that the rebel writer either did not know or had not the honesty to acknowledge that in this affair the rebel divisions named (the divisions of HOKE and McLAWS 'and "other portions of Longstreet's" corps) were fighting nothing but cavalry, who, dismounted, and with their carbines were able to punish the rebels, breaking one entire division, and after retiring were able to hold in check the whole of LONGSTREET'S corps until WRIGHT and SMITH got up. Of the sequel the rebel writer says nothing: that remains to be told. Having arrived, in the afternoon, the corps of WRIGHT and SMITH formed in line of battle, WRIGHT in four lines, and SMITH in a single line on the right of the Sixth.

In front of our line was an open space of two-thirds of a mile in width, beyond which in a piece of pine woods, the enemy was in force, intrenched. Across this opening Gen. SMITH ordered a charge, which was brilliantly executed by DEVINS' division, (brigades of DRAKE and BARTON.) The division, though moving at the pas de charge, suffered very heavily from the artillery of the enemy which had a clean sweep of the field. DRAKE'S brigade especially had been much cut up, its leader had fallen mortally wounded, and on reaching the rebel ranks began to waver. BARTON'S brigade, however, emerging from the woods on its right, dashed forward with a yell, cleared the abattis, and gained the enemy's works, taking about 300 prisoners. RICKETTS' division of the Sixth Corps, which was formed on the left of DEVINS', behaved with equal gallantry, carried the rebel rifle-pits, and also took sever al hundred prisoners. The enemy, however, still held his position on the right of SMITH, in front of the division of BROOKES. With the view of dislodging him from this position, HENRY'S brigade, of BROOKES' division, was ordered forward, and succeeded in taking the rifle-pits. Here, however, he was swept by the fire from a redoubt in his front, and MARTINDALE, who was ordered to support, not having been able to effect his dispositions in time to do so, HENRY was compelled to fall back. the enem following him to the skirt of the woods. The position thus carried was, as will presently be seen, one of cardinal importance, though it was purchased at a loss of two thousand killed and wounded. The rebel loss cannot have been less, as we took nearly six hundred prisoners, and the enemy left many hundred dead and wounded within our lines.

IV.

COLD HARBOR—ITS MILITARY IMPORTANCE.

The operations of Wednesday, though they had cost us dearly, had won a point of the very highest value, and this not merely tactically and with regard to operations on our immediate front, but strategically, and in relation both to present and prospective movements. Cold Harbor is the point of convergence of all the roads radiating whether to Richmond—our objective point, or to White House—our base of supplies. Until we gained this point, indeed, we had no line of communication with our base, except by making an immense detour to the north of the Pamunky. The importance of this point was, no doubt, appreciated by the rebels, and one of the Richmond papers, several days ago, and before we had begun moving in this direction, said in a witty prophecy in reference to GRANT'S favorite tactics, that "GRANT has grown so enamored of his left flank that he will probably work his way down toward the James River, and we shall have another decisive battle of Cold Harbor." By this, the writer means what we term the battle of Gaines' Mills—that having been the position held by the corps of FITZ JOHN PORTER in the battle of 1862, while Cold Harbor was held by Stonewall JACKSON. In the battle of to-day the relations were just reversed—we holding Cold Harbor, while the rebels hold Gaines' Mills. Why, in recognizing the commanding importance of the point to us, LEE did not make preparations to hold it at all hazards, is a question which he will find difficult to answer with entire satisfaction. Discovering on the night of Tuesday that the Sixth Corps was retiring from the front of his left wing, (held by LONGSTREET'S command,) he rapidly countermarched LONGSTREET to anticipate us in the possession of Cold Harbor; and there is little doubt that he would have been able to seize it in advance of us had it not been for the admirable tenacity with which our cavalry held on to it until it was relieved, and the position was secured beyond a peradventure, by the arrival of the columns of SMITH and WRIGHT.

V.

BEFORE THE BATTLE.

Cold Harbor being secured by the action of Wednesday, Gen. GRANT determined to give battle the day following, for the purpose of effecting the passage of the Chickahominy. Accordingly, during the night, HANCOCK'S corps, which, by the previous withdrawal of the Sixth Corps, held the right of the line, was moved and took position on the extreme left; and early on Thursday, the headquarters of Gens. GRANT and MEADE, which had been in the rear of the right, were transferred to the rear of the left and established at Cold Harbor. It had, as I have said, been designed to give battle on Thursday; but HANCOCK was compelled to fight his corps into position, and his formation was not completed until afternoon. The attack was then ordered for 5 o'clock in the afternoon; but a thunder-storm as heavy as that which swelled the Chickahominy on the day before Fair Oaks, set in, and the order had to be countermanded.

The hour of attack was then fixed for 4:30 o'clock this morning. Had Gen. LEE, under these circumstances, emulated the conduct of that Union General whose chief glory is to be thought well of by the rebels, and planted his army astraddle the Chickahominy, as McCLELLAN did, the storm which swelled that stream yesterday afternoon might have given Gen. GRANT an opportunity which you may depend upon it he would have improved. But while the rebels praise McCLELLAN they do not imitate him. LEE had his entire force north of the Chickahominy, and the only result of the delay in attack ceused by the rise in the river was to give the enemy, who had by this time discovered the disposition of our troops, the hours of night during which to perfect his defensive preparations.

VI.

THE SITUATION AT 4 A. M., FRIDAY.

In saddle at 4 o'clock in the morning, the gray light of dawn is struggling through a thick envelope of clouds, and a light pattering rain is falling. Our men still lie behind their breastworks, worn out with the work of the night; the rebels, too, lie behind their intrenchments, and only the sleepless pickets peer with wary eyes forward through the dusk of the woods. All is still as the grave, yet in thirty minutes the storm of battle will burst forth along a stretch of six miles. There is but time to take a glance at the lines: Here on the left wing of the army is the corps of HANCOCK, (the Second;) connecting with him on the right, and forming the left centre, is WRIGHT'S, (the Sixth;) then SMITH'S, (the Eighteenth,) which holds the centre; next comes WARREN'S, (the Fifth,) which forms the right centre, and then BURNSIDE'S, (the Ninth,) which holds the extreme right. Our line runs almost parallel with the Chickahominy and from one and a half to two and a half miles north of it. On the left wing we approach nearest the river, on the right we are somewhat refused. HANCOCK, holding the left wing, rests across the Dispatch Station road, (that is, the road leading from Cold Harbor to Dispatch Station;) our right is across the Totopamoy. The rebel front is formed immediately in front of the Chickahominy, in three lines, (two lines of battle and a skirmish line,) on an irregular line to conform with the woods and ridges and swamps of the ground. Between the two armies is a low, swampy region, whose dark hollows will soon be lit up with the fires of death. Suddenly from behind the rude parapet there is an upstarting, a noiseless springing to arms, the muffled commands of officers forming the line. The attack was ordered for 4:30, and it may have been five minutes after that, or it may have been ten minutes, but it certainly was not later than 4:45 when the whole line is in motion. Skirmishers are thrown out, and presently meet the enemy's pickets as we learn by the smart fusillade you hear; our artillery opens, the rebels respond, and in a moment the deadly conflict is joined.

VII.

TEN MINUTES OF HISTORY.

The metaphysicians say that time is naught, is but a category of thought; and I think it must be so, for into ten mortal minutes this morning was crowded an age of action. Ten minutes of the figment men call time, and yet that scant space decided a battle! There are a thousand details, ten thousand episodes, but the essential matter is this, that that first rush of advance carried our whole front butt up against a line of works, which we were unable to break through, or, breaking through, were unable to hold. Conceive of this in the large—the fierce onslaught amid deafening volleys of musketry and the thunder of artillery, and the wild, mad yell of battle, and see the ranks mown down, and the lines break here and there, and the sullen, obstinate retreat, every inch contested, and we shall then be able to descend to some of the points of action as they individualize themselves along the line.

VIII.

HANCOCK held the left of the whole line of battle; and of his three divisions, that of BARLOW held the extreme left of the army, that of GIBBON was drawn on the right of BARLOW'S, while BIRNEY'S division was held in reserve. Of the four brigades of BARLOW'S division, BROOKS had the left and MILES the right—each brigade in double line of battle. SMITH, commanding the Irish Brigade, was placed in support. The left was protected by refusing it—the Third Brigade being disposed so as to cover that flank.

The formation of GIBBON'S division on the right of BARLOW was similar, TYLER'S brigade (heavy artillery) holding the right, SMITH'S the centre and OWEN'S the left—McKEAN in rear of TYLER'S centre, in two lines. On HANCOCK'S line there were but few places where artillery could be used with effect.

BARLOW had directed that his attacking brigades should, previously to the assault, be moved out, and formed just in rear of the picket line. From this point they advanced for half a mile through woods and over open intervals, under a severe fire, square up to the enemy's works. That portion of his front where the right of MILES' brigade joined with the left of BROOKS'—the same brigades that so brilliantly carried the famous salient in the lines of Spottsylvania—succeeded in a similar splendid coup here; they got over and into the enemy's parapet, capturing his guns, (four light 12-pounders,) his colors and five or six hundred prisoners, about 300 of whom were secured by promptly passing them to the rear. The storming column, in fact, were just turning the enemy's guns on the retreating rebels, when powerful reinforcements from the second rebel line appeared advancing. The first rebel line was held by BRECKINRIDGE'S troops and was carried, but LEE is too good a General to leave a point so important thus weakly defended. BRECKINRIDGE'S men were placed in the fore-front to receive the baptism of fire, but behind these lay the veterans of HILL'S corps, and it is these we now see dashing forward to retrieve the honors we had snatched. BARLOW'S brigades—stout hearts not used to pale before the greatest odds—could have held their own under conditions the least short of desperation, but the situation in which they now found themselves, o'erleaped its limits. It was not merely the overwhelming front that came pressing down upon them, of that they had no fear, but the position they had gained placed them in advance of the whole line of battle, and gave the rebel artillery the opportunity for a deadly enfilading fire. Beside this, they had lost the directing heads of two of the chief commanders. BROOKS and BYRNES, "souls of courage all compact," fell mortally wounded, and all the organizations had suffered fearfully from an unparalleled loss of officers. In this state of facts they fell back, bringing with them the prisoners they had taken and a captured color, but not the guns. They fell back, but not to their original position; to a position far in advance of that they had held, and at different points not more than fifty yards from the enemy. Here they intrenched, and here I leave them to pass on to GIBBONS' division of the same corps on the right, and which was engaged at the same time.

GIBBONS' advance was simultaneous with BARLOW'S, but in moving forward, he came upon one of the swamps of the Chickahominy, which had to be turned or overpassed, in the process of which it became very difficult to establish the connection between different parts of his line. This overcome, however, his troops pressed forward with the same vigor that marked the conduct of their companion division on the left. Parts of the brigades of TYLER and OWEN gained the rebel works, but for reasons identical with those that forced back BARLOW'S troops, they also were compelled to give up what they had won. GIBBONS' division, too, lost very heavily. Gen. TYLER, before reaching the works, was carried off the field, shot in the ankle. One of his regimental commanders, Col. PORTER, of the Eighth New-York Heavy Artillery, was killed: immediately after, the Lieutenant-Colonel (BATES) fell dead. Another of his regimental commanders, Col. McMAHON, of the One Hundred and Sixty-fourth New-York, was struck while planting his colors on the rebel works, and was left a prisoner in the enemy's hands—his troops not supporting him after he was wounded. OWEN'S brigade lost two entire companies taken prisoners inside of the enemy's intrenchments. In giving way, GIBBONS' division also was far from losing all the ground it had gained. It took up an advanced position, close to the enemy, and just over the crest, the rearward slope of which was held by the rebels. This position it has retained during the day, and McKEAN'S brigade has held all day a position within fifteen yards of the enemy's works.

IX.

THE KEY-POINT OF THE BATTLE, AND HOW IT WAS LOST.

Not until the splendid attack of HANCOCK'S Corps had been made, not till after its blood-bought victory had been wrested from our hands, was he or any man in this army aware of the supreme importance of the position this morning carried and lost. The key-point in the battle of Gaines' Mills, two years ago, it is strange and mortifying that no one should have appreciated its value. This position is a bald hill, named "Watts' Hill," dominating the whole battle-ground, and covering the angle of the "Dispatch road." Along this ridge the rebel works formed a salient, and in front of it was a sunken road. Of this road HANCOCK got possession, and the brigades of MILES and BROOKS actually struck and carried the work directly on the salient! Had we held this point, we would have had a position whence the entire rebel line might have been enfiladed; and I think it is not too much to say that the day would have been ours, and LEE pushed across the Chickahominy. Had we even known in advance its commanding importance, very different dispositions for attack would have been made: we would have massed on the left, and made the victory a certainty. These considerations certainly inspire bitter regrets; but who does not know that it is on precisely such contingencies that the fate of battles often hangs?

X.

THE LEFT CENTRE AND CENTRE.—WRIGHT AND SMITH.

Simultaneously with the attack of the Second Corps, the Sixth, under WRIGHT, connecting on the left with HANCOCK, made a general advance at a quarter before five o'clock—each division assaulting on the entire line. Of this corps, the Second Division, (McNEILL,) held the right, the Third Division, (RICKETTS,) the centre, and the First Division, (RUSSELL,) the left. Five batteries, under charge of the Chief of Artillery of the Second Corps, Col. TOMPKINS—namely: Adams' First Rhode Island Battery, Cowan's First New-York, (Independent,) Hahn's Third New-York, (Independent,) McCurtin's First Massachusetts, and Rhode's First Rhode Island, were planted in good positions and did effective service in covering the advance. The assault of the Sixth Corps was made with the utmost vigor, and succeeded in carrying the first line of rebel rifle-pits along its entire front, and got up within two hundred and fifty yards of the main works. SMITH'S Corps, connecting on the right with the Sixth, had advanced in conjunction with it; but the left division, that of MARTINDALE, who led the attack in heavy, deep columns, got disarranged, and was repulsed. Gen. SMITH made three different attacks to relieve MARTINDALE, but his last supports did not get up in time to allow him to hold on. The effect of this repulse on the left of SMITH had a disastrous effect on the position of WRIGHT. It uncovered the right flank of the Sixth, and exposed RICKETTS' Division, which was stoutly holding the advanced position, to a savage fire on the prolongation of its line. In this state of facts, to retain possession of a position somewhat in advance of his point of starting, was the utmost Gen. WRIGHT could possibly do.

XI.

OPERATIONS ON THE RIGHT AND RIGHT-CENTRE—WARREN AND BURNSIDE.

Operations along the fronts of WARREN and BURNSIDE were of an importance quite subordinate to that of operations on the left. No results were achieved except the carrying of the line of rifle-pits occupied by the rebel skirmishers. The Fifth and Ninth Corps nowhere struck the enemy's main work. BURNSIDE kept up a furious cannonade for some hours; but it was nothing—vox et preterea nihil. From the tenor of one of BURNSIDE'S morning dispatches, it was at one time hoped that he would be able to turn the enemy's left; but this hope also was doomed to disappointment.

XII.

A LONG LULL—INCIDENTS OF THE DAY.

Returning from the ride along the lines at 8 A. M., I found that Gens. GRANT and MEADE had established their personal headquarters in advance of that occupied during the night, and had taken their station on the site of Cold Harbor, where Gen. WRIGHT'S headquarters were fixed—he himself, however, having gone forward with his corps. The rain of the early morning ceased, and the sun was struggling through the clouds.

The fate of the day was like the aspect of the heavens above—mingled light and shade, a clear issue nowhere. The first terrible climax of the battle was over. Would the assault be renewed?

To those looking into the face of GRANT for an answer to this query, there was no legible response. His is a face that tells no tales—a face impassive in victory or defeat; face of stone; a sphinx face! Not of him can it be said, as Lady Macbeth to her lord: "Thy face, my thane, is as a book, wherein one may read strange things." Rather is it a palimpsest, whose obscured characters escape the scrutiny of the keenest-eyed searcher.

Nothing, indeed, could be more striking than the contrast presented by the two commanders, as they stood in consultation on that bare hill, with their faces turned Richmond-ward. The small form with the slight stoop in the shoulders, sunken grey eyes, still, reserved demeanor, impassive face and chin as of a bull-dog or close-set steel trap—that is GRANT; the tall figure, with the nervous, emphatic articulation and action, and face as of antique parchment—that is MEADE—and the antipodes could not bring together a greater contrast.

Whether it was that Gen. GRANT himself was in doubt as to the path which should be pursued, or that he felt the needs of seeing for himself the actual situation—for from our point of vision everything was hid by a veil of woods—I know not, but he suddenly mounted his horse, and rode rapidly down (an occasional shot or shell passing over his head and falling around us at headquarters) to the headquarters of Gen. HANCOCK, and afterward to those of Gen. WRIGHT; and when he came back it was plain there would be no renewal of the battle, for we all rode leisurely back to the old camp occupied the night before.

This was noon; and though the white heat of battle had died out, there were still spirts of fight along the line, and vigorous interchange of fire from the hostile batteries. Such rencounters were inevitable from the unparalleled closeness of the opposing lines. This was particularly the case on the left, where there were points at which the rebels and our own men were divided but by a narrow neutral interval of fifty yards. As the possibility of our troops occupying a line in such proximity to the enemy's works may not be clear, I will offer a word of explanation. The rebel intrenchments in front of BARLOW'S and GIBBONS' divisions had, with a fault of engineering of which the rebels are not often guilty, been drawn on the rearward slope of the crest and th own too far back, so that after the repulse of our men, the moment they had fallen back over the ridge, they were partially under cover, and here the sharpshooters were able to keep the rebel heads down long enough to allow portions of our line to protect themselves with improvised parapets, which they held all day.

This explanation is the more needed, because

THE WAR IN AMERICA.

RECEPTION OF THE NEWS IN ENGLAND.

The news of the great battles in Virginia, received by the steamship Europa, caused a profound sensation throughout England, and the people were astounded at the magnitude of the losses. The probable result of the bloody combat was eagerly canvassed on all sides.

The Confederate Loan recovered three per cent., and cotton became weaker under the news.

The Times says:

"GRANT hatefully justified his reputation for unconquerable tenacity. If he has not achieved absolute success he has bid for it more desperately, and approached it more nearly than any of his predecessors. It is true the intelligence from the field of battle reached us through Federal sources, and is, perhaps, colored somewhat favorably for the North. It is hard to discern the inclination of the balance, so evenly do the scales appear to be weighed. LINCOLN'S proclamation and SEARTON'S bulletin speaks of the Federal success in terms so qualified as to express anything rather than confidence, while the premium on gold, which was 73 when GRANT began his march and which fell to 69 at one period, has risen to 77; it was 75½ at the departure of the mail. The successive retrenchments of the Confederate Commander was but so many judicious and preconcerted operations of the campaign. In none of these movements was there the slightest confusion or the evidence of inferiority. The whole road to Richmond, be it remembered, is a series of positions which have long been studied and strengthened by the Confederates, terminating in a capital fortified by all the defences which modern art could devise, through a period of three years. LEE, if he falls back, is only falling back from one strong post to another, till he finds himself in the strongest post of all. GRANT, if he falls back over so little, gives up the game, while if he persists in advancing, he discovers harder work than ever before him at the end of each day's march, and separates himself from his supplies in the same proportion."

From the London Times, May 25.

The details of the great battles in America are calculated rather to enhance than diminish the sensation with which the telegrams were received. There has been no exaggeration, no overstrained description of the conflicts or the carnage. If, indeed, it be recollected that even the long reports of furious fighting, which we yesterday published, still leave us days of sanguinary action unaccounted for, it will be allowed that war has never come before us in a shape so appalling. Perhaps the Americans may be proud of the preeminence, but they have certainly fought more desperately, for a longer time, and with more dreadful slaughter than any nation before them. It would not be impossible to match the results of any one day's battle with stories from the wars of the Old World; but never, we should think, in the history of man, were five such battles as these compressed into six successive days. It is hard to conceive how nature could have supported the exhaustion and the strain. We have been told that after a single day's hard fighting the lassitude and reaction in even a victorious army are such that any fresh force might snatch its laurels from it; whereas here are two armies hotly engaged in the work of slaughter from the morning of Thursday till the night of Tuesday with scarcely the intermission of an hour. On every day except Saturday there was a pitched battle, contested with the utmost fury; and even Saturday was devoted to marching and fighting on the march. Nor were these prodigious operations divided among immense numbers brought into action by relays. Neither army numbered apparently over one hundred thousand men, and of these every man seemed to have been engaged in every battle. Indeed, we are expressly told that the Federal "reserves" were brought up on the very first day.

The desperate ferocity of the fighting may be inferred from the fact now reported that the slaughter was produced without the aid of artillery. Rifled guns or murderous shells did execution among crowded masses. The great battle of Friday, which is said to have cost the Federals alone upward of 10,000 men, was a hand-to-hand fight. The Confederates were posted in the well-known woods in the vicinity of Chancellorsville, where HOOKER once received so bloody a repulse, and so dense was the thicket that cannon could not come into play. Regiment against regiment, and man against man, the combatants fired and hacked at each other in the tangled wilderness till night closed in; and an intercepted report from Gen. LEE actually tells us that, on his side, the heaviest loss was in man killed outright, and that he had comparatively few wounded. If this be a correct version of the dispatch, it gives a more impressive idea of the fury of the conflict than any other of the incidents reported. It is clear, indeed, that whatever may be said of the composition of the Northern armies, and of their inferiority in this respect to the patriot legions of the South, they have fought in this campaign with a valor as obstinate as that of their enemies. No mere indifferent or pugnacious mercenaries could have been led from a battle like that at Wilderness to three more such battles at Spottsylvania. Be the impulse what it may, the Federals are fighting in stern reality, and with a spirit as resolute as that of their adversaries.

Except that Gen. LEE more than once surprised the Federals with a sudden attack in mass, and that his positions were always occupied with admirable skill, there appears to have been little display of strategy. On Thursday LEE attacked, and with a result which at one moment looked very like success. On Friday GRANT attacked, and LEE repulsed him. On Sunday and Monday GRANT attacked again, with no better result; on Tuesday LEE appears to have been once more the assailant. But in all these battles there was more fighting than manœuvring, and more loss than result. Now that the outlines of the earlier telegrams have been filled up by detailed reports, the contest appears even more indecisive and the issue more obscure than before. For the Confederates, it may be said that they have never actually lost a battle. On the first day LEE only failed to inflict a complete defeat on the advancing Federals. On the second day he himself claimed the victory, and his enemies hardly denied it. On the fourth and fifth days he repulsed every attack, and held his position; while on the sixth day he was strong enough and confident enough to refuse his adversary the respite he desired. As we are told, on the authority of Secretary STANTON himself, that GRANT did not design to renew the attack on Tuesday, whereas we know that the fighting on that day was the most desperate of all, it follows that the battle must have been provoked by LEE, so that as the curtain falls on this first act of the dreadful drama the Confederates are assuming the offensive, and compelling the Northern General to fight against his will. For the Federals it may be fairly claimed that if they have not won a battle, they have twice gained some of the results of victory. They sustained the attacks of the Confederates on the first day so successfully that they themselves were able to become the assailants the day after, and if they failed to dislodge the enemy from his position they saw him voluntarily retire from it after the fight was done. They attacked him again at Spottsylvania in his third position, and against those lines and defences their whole force has hitherto been hurled in vain. Yet for all this, GRANT, though he cannot get on, has not been compelled to fall back, and as he stands he is actually twenty miles on the road to Richmond.

With valor and obstinacy so evenly balanced, it may seem as if the issue would be decided by resources and endurance. That, indeed, has always been a favorite belief among the Northern people; but we see few signs of such a result. One of the Federal reports of the second day's battle says that in the Northern army men cried to each other, "The rebels can't endure another such day, and we can." But the "rebels" did endure two more such days, and after enduring them, fell again upon their antagonists, and forced them to yet another battle. The exhaustion on both sides must be terrible. It is reasonable to conjecture that the Confederates, receiving in position, and behind defences, the attacks of the Federals, may have suffered less than their enemies, but they have, perhaps, fewer troops in reserve. All we know, however, of this question is that, notwithstanding the smaller population of the Southern States, their armies have never yet been found wanting in strength sufficient for the occasion. Wherever a Federal force advanced, whether in Virginia or in Texas, in Tennessee or in Louisiana, there a Confederate force equal to the encounter has always been found. After all the prophecies of Southern exhaustion this result has invariably been experienced, and it is even more manifest in this fourth year of the war than it was in the first. We certainly do wonder how six millions can make such head against twenty millions, but the thing has been done. We can no more speculate on the "exhaustion" of the South than its submission or its repentance.

It is remarkable that in all the battles of this civil war the original estimate of the losses suffered by the contending armies has at least been verified. It was supposed at first that the transatlantic propensity to exaggeration might have magnified these ominous figures, but the statements were invariably confirmed; and when, therefore, we are told on the present occasion that GRANT, who opened the campaign on the morning of the 5th with 100,000 men, had lost 40,000 of this number by the night of the 10th, we cannot altogether refuse to believe the tale. We may, indeed, ask ourselves what State or people could sustain such warfare, but we have no right to discredit the report. More directly, too, we may inquire in what condition or with what forces he can expect to appear before Richmond, even in the event of his success, if this is the cost of the two first stages of the journey. Yet we think it probable that even the last furious onslaught of LEE on the 10th may not have deterred him from renewing the attack on one of the following days. He (GRANT) has stamped a new character on the tactics of the Federals. No other General would either have advanced upon Wilderness after the severe battle of the 5th, or followed up an almost victorious though restless enemy after he still harder fighting on the 8th; he, again, would have left attacked his adversary so resolutely on the 8th and on the 9th, or held his ground so tenaciously in spite of failure. Under his command the Army of the Potomac has achieved in invading Virginia an amount of success never achieved before, except in repelling invasion. The Confederate forces were once arrested by MCCLELLAN and once by MEADE, but that was when they thought to carry war into Northern territory. GRANT alone has done more than this. He has advanced toward Richmond, and though he has made but little way, and has lost half his army, he has not been driven back. Whether his position can be retained, or his success improved, is a question which the next mail will resolve for us.

The Times, of the 26th, says, the strategy of GRANT consists simply in pushing forward his whole force, hurling it against the Southern positions and inflicting loss on the enemy by submitting to a loss which is greater on his own side; but the further GRANT advances through a depopulated country, along wretched roads, and with the ever-lengthening line of his communications exposed to the Confederate cavalry and guerrillas, the more unable will he be to keep up his attack on the Confederates, who, on the contrary, fall back on their resources, and fight in a country which is entirely their own. The Times adds, however, the war may go on in Virginia. It is pretty clear that the hold of the Federals is loosening on the Southwest, and that even their great resources are insufficient for the permanent occupation of a territory so vast.

The Daily News thinks the North has at last found that Gen. GRANT possesses a military skill and moral power which have hitherto been unknown on the Federal side, even the brilliancy of LEE's achievements does not surpass the masterly skill with which GRANT has arranged the combined movement of troops from the frontier of Georgia to the banks of the Potomac. The crushing vigor which has directed his blows in the field and the dogged tenacity which refuses to admit the necessity of retreat on the possibility of disaster. In short, GRANT has fixed his teeth in his adversary, with sleepless tenacity he clings to him, nor have all the efforts of Southern skill and all the desperate courage of the Southern chivalry been able to shake off the sturdy Northerner or even to make him relax his hold.

The London Morning Post sees no appreciable advantage on either side, but on the following day it expresses a conviction that the Federals sustained a crushing defeat.

The London Star thinks that Gen. GRANT has paid too dear for his victory, and regards his success as indecisive.

The London Morning Herald pronounces the advance on Richmond a failure, and hopes the South has passed its last fiery trial.

The Globe thinks BUTLER is undoubtedly in a position that renders Richmond unsafe. The mischief he can do depends on the strength of his force. If LEE should have retreated upon Richmond it will be an indication that BUTLER is more powerful and dangerous than from the Federal reports we judge to be. It also thinks that Gen. LEE fully succeeded in barring the road of Gen. GRANT to Richmond.

The Herald is authorized to state that the alleged correspondence between President DAVIS and Earl RUSSELL, on the subject of the Birkenhead rams, is a forgery.

PARLIAMENTARY PROCEEDINGS.

In the House of Commons on the 23d, Mr. LAYARD, in reply to an inquiry by Mr. WATKIN, said there were no negotiations pending with the American Government in reference to the proposed termination or repeal by the United States of the Reciprocity Treaty and of the Boundary Act.

The London papers publish copies of a correspondence between Mr. THOMAS BARING and Lord ROBERT CECIL in regard to an assertion by the latter in a debate in the House of Commons that Messrs. BARING BROTHERS had conveyed large quantities of munitions of war to the Federal States, in violation of Her Majesty's neutrality proclamation. Mr. BARING explains that his house had acted simply as the bankers and agents of parties in America, and claims that they neither, in letter or spirit, infringed the Queen's proclamation.

Lord ROBERT CECIL abides by his original assertion, but admits that such a lax interpretation has been put upon the proclamation that the proceedings of Messrs. BARINGS cannot be regarded as censurable or improper. He claims an equally liberal interpretation when the proclamation is applied to the furnishing of ships, &c., to the Confederates.

The London Times, in an editorial on this correspondence, says: 'As far as general usage can decide the questions, the proceedings of Messrs. BARING were blameless; but it does not follow from this that Mr. T. BARING or any other Federal agent or advocate is entitled to establish a distinction between the sale of ships and other contraband of war, and while holding themselves blameless in exporting thousands of rifles, to denounce others who are building a gunboat."

The Morning Herald thinks that if the house of Baring has the right to send shiploads of rifles to the North, the builders on the Mersey, the Tyne or the Clyde have just as much right to send armed vessels to the South.

THE REBEL PIRATES.

The rebel cruiser Georgia had been announced for sale at Liverpool by private treaty. The crew were paid and the stores sold at auction.

THE GERITY PIRATES.

The Court of Queen's Bench, on the 25th, delivered judgment in the case of the three pirates of the schooner J. L. Gerity. The Chief Justice was of the opinion that the men ought to be committed for piracy, with a view to be given up to the Federal Government.

The two other Judges were of a contrary opinion. They did not consider that it was a case which came within the act and the treaty, and said that the prisoners were entitled to a discharge.

The prisoners were consequently liberated.

The purchase money paid by the Government for the Laird rams is reported at £225,000.

THE DANO-GERMAN QUESTION.

The Ministers explained that Prussia had promised to stop her exactions in Jutland and pay for the contributions levied since the armistice.

It was reported that the British Government had consented to a plebiscite in Schleswig-Holstein, and that arrangements were in progress which preclude a resumption of hostilities.

The King of Prussia, in response to an address for the Independence of Schleswig-Holstein, expressed confidence that the sacrifices of Germany would conduce to the interests of Fatherland.

FRANCE.

A squadron of six men-of-war had left France for Tunis.

It was reported that the Mexican loan would not be allotted in September.

The Duke de Malakoff, (Marshal PELISSIER,) Governor of Algeria, is dead. He was in his seventieth year.

Advices from Algeria report further successes by the French over the insurgents.

The Bourse on the 24th was weaker. Rentes closed at 66f. 65c.

The session of the Corps Legislatiff will be prolonged until the 28th of May.

The Bourse was firmer, the Rentes closing, on the 26th, at 66f. 80c.

THE PRINCIPALITIES.

Another reactionary conspiracy against Prince COWZA had been discovered at Jassy. The result of the popular voting had been almost everywhere unanimous in favor of Prince COWZA.

VERY LATEST PER VIRGINIA.

[By telegraph to Queenstown.]

LIVERPOOL, Wednesday, MAY 25.

The steamship City of Washington, from New-York, has arrived.

The advices from America, brought by the steamship City of Washington, of the progress of Lieut.-Gen. GRANT's movements, has increased the excitement and sensation produced by the first announcement of Union successes received per steamship Europa. The news is most generally regarded as very disastrous to the rebel cause.

The rebel loan has declined, in consequence of the favorable Union news, and is quoted 5@6 per cent lower.

The Globe announces that the two steam rams at Liverpool, respecting the destination of which so much controversy had taken place, are now the property of Her Majesty. It states that their purchase by Government is in all respects a satisfactory ending of an unpleasant and complicated affair. The country will now be spared the great expense of the trial at bar that was impending with the consequences of a possible adverse decision.

THE NEWS BY THE CHINA.

HALIFAX, Monday, June 6.

The steamship China, Capt. ANDERSON, from Liverpool on the 28th, via Queenstown on the 29th of MAY, arrived here at 5½ o'clock yesterday (Sunday) evening. She has 30 passengers for this port and 58 for Boston.

The dates per the China are four days later.

The steamship Belgian, from New-York, arrived at Liverpool on the morning of the 27th.

The steamship Scotia, from New-York, arrived at Liverpool on the 27th.

AMERICAN AFFAIRS.

The London Times publishes a letter from its correspondent at Richmond, dated April 21, showing that the Confederate Government had obtained most exact information in regard to the plans of the Federals for the present campaign. In a dispatch, written a fortnight before Gen. GRANT commenced his march, the operations of his army, since recorded, are delineated with extraordinary precision.

The Army and Navy Gazette reviews the operations of the campaign in Virginia, and says that GRANT appears to be in great danger, and that BUTLER's chances of escape from his position are not appreciable. The repulse of SIGEL liberates LEE's left from serious menace. Neither SHERMAN's occupation of Resaca, nor the advanced position of the Federals in the face of the enemy, compensate for the great peril of their situation.

THE DANO-GELMAN QUESTION.

The conference was to assemble the day the China left Liverpool.

The Morning Post says: The representatives will announce officially the opinions of their Governments on the proposed arrangement for the subdivision of Schleswig, the northern portion being amalgamated with Denmark, and the southern with Holstein.

The Post thinks there are great improbabilities of either Denmark or Germany assenting to the proposition.

Austria and Prussia were said to be in complete accord, and it was asserted in one of their organs that they contemplate offering resolutions for the complete separation of the Duchies from Denmark.

Accounts from Jutland recount very arbitrary proceedings by the Prussians since the conclusion of the armistice.

The Berlin Journal denies any violation of the armistice by the Allies having taken place.

The Paris papers assert that England, Russia and Sweden intend to propose a stipulation that Kiel shall not become a Federal port, nor Rendsburg a Federal fortress.

The Patrie states that the Council of Ministers at Copenhagen have resolved not to consent to a division of Schleswig, and have directed the Danish Plenipotentiary rather than consent to it to quit the Conference.

The German papers say that Prussia and Austria intend exerting their utmost influence in favor of AUGUSTENBURG for the throne of the Duchies.

Continental papers assert that the basis of the arrangement to be adopted consists of a union of Holstein and six Southern communes of Schleswig to Germany, and the incorporation of the rest of Schleswig permanently with Denmark.

The London Times fears that the belligerents will not consent to a peaceful division on reasonable principles of the territory claimed by both. The Germans believe they may do what they please without the fear of exiting more than England's indignation. Denmark on the other hand is in no hurry to end the war, having little more to lose, and hoping much from the chapter of accidents. To bring rival abstinacies into agreement is the task of the neutral members of the conference, and this is not likely to be accomplished in to-day's sitting.

In the House of Lords on the 26th, the conduct of the Germans in their observation of the terms of the armistice was debated and generally denounced.

Earl RUSSELL said that the Danish Government had determined to collect the facts and report them to the conference. In the meantime he recommended a suspension of judgment. He likewise defended the Government from the attacks against it for not having backed its moral arguments by physical force in the question of Denmark and Poland. He also asserted that the Queen had always cheerfully followed the advice of the Cabinet.

THE DANISH LOSSES DURING THE WAR.

KIEL, Wednesday, May 18.

The following is said to be a correct account of the losses in men and artillery the Danes have sustained during the campaign:

At Missunde, about 60 killed and wounded.

At Oberselk, 630 killed and wounded, 168 prisoners and two guns.

At Oversee, 970 killed and wounded and 320 prisoners.

At the evacuation of the Dannewerke, 116 guns.

Before Flensburg, about 150 prisoners and three guns.

During the seige of Duppel, 600 killed and wounded, 600 prisoners, 2,000 sick, and 2,500 discharged (Holsteiners). At the storming of the forts, 1,300 killed and wounded, 3,145 prisoners, and 118 guns.

At Veile, 720 killed and wounded, 310 prisoners and two guns.

At the evacuation of Fredericia, 226 guns.

Sick since the commencement of hostilities, 3,000.

The total deduction to be made from the Danish strength therefore amounts to 16,473 men, of whom at least 300 are officers, besides 467 guns.

GREAT BRITAIN.

PARLIAMENTARY PROCEEDINGS.

In the House of Commons reference had again been made to the return of the British troops from Canada.

The Marquis of Hartington said that it was intended to withdraw two batallions of guards and a batallion of the military train, principally on account of the heavy cost for the hire of building accommodation for troops in Canada.

Sir B. SMITH inquired whether the communication made by the American Minister to China to Mr. SEWARD, on the 20th of June, 1863, respecting the point policy to be pursued in China by England, Russia, France and America, was in accordance with the dispatch addressed to Earl RUSSELL by Sir F. BRUCE, and what was the nature of his (RUSSELL's) reply to that dispatch.

Mr. LAYARD said that much misapprehension prevailed on the subject, and he was not exactly aware what dispatch was referred to. He offered to produce any extracts from the correspondence on the subject.

Mr. HANBURY inquired whether there was any foundation for the published correspondence between Earl RUSSELL and JEFFERSON DAVIS.

Mr. LAYARD replied that the correspondence was a hoax, and not a very ingenious one at that.

Mr. HENNESSY attacked the policy of the Government on the Polish question. He denounced the tyrannical course of Russia, and moved a resolution declaring, "that the British Government is no longer bound to acknowledge the dominion of Russia in Poland."

Lord PALMERSTON replied, and finally the resolution was withdrawn.

Parliamentary proceedings on the 27th were unimportant.

THE REBEL RAMS.

In the Court of Exchequer the Solicitor General caused the case of the Crown against the steam rams at Liverpool to be withdrawn, arrangements having been made with the defendants, by which it was agreed that a verdict should be taken for the Crown. He added that the object of the Government was not to punish by fine and penalty, but simply to maintain "neutrality."

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Board of Trade have refused to reconsider the sentence passed on Capt. KENNEDY for the loss of the steamer City of New-York. It is stated that the Inman Steamship Line will be transferred from Queenstown to Kinsale if the latter should prove the safest harbor.

The "Oaks" was won by Fille De Lair, a French mare, by half a length. The public indignation and excitement was intense. Great groaning greeted the announcement of the result, and the horse and his jockey had to be protected by the Police on their return to the scale. Both escaped injury.

The "Derby" was won by Blair Athol, Gen. Peel coming in second and Scottish Chief third. There were thirty starters, and the race was a magnificent one.

LATEST PER CHINA.

VIA LIVERPOOL, SATURDAY, 28TH.

The Times remarks: "Gen. GRANT is following the military arithmetic of NAPOLEON, which promised certain results as the product of so many thousand lives; but NAPOLEON always aimed at a vital point; whereas, the Confederates and the Confederate cause has no one vital point. The capture of Richmond will never bring the North one step nearer to the restoration of the Union or the conquest of the South. If Gen. GRANT ever marches into Richmond, he may find that LEE has exacted the utmost obtainable price in blood, and will leave the position in his hands with no greater value than that attached to the Wilderness after the fighting was over. The advantages of ground, position and intelligence, are with the Confederates, and Washington has been nearer captured, more than once, than Richmond is now. If LEE can make Gen. GRANT pay current rate for every mile of ground, it may be a question whether the resources and endurance of the Federals will prove as inexhaustible as the obstinacy of their General.

OBITUARY.

The Duke of Malakoff.

By the European arrivals yesterday, we have intelligence of the death of the Duke of Malakoff, more widely known as General and Marshal PELISSIER, the Commander-in-Chief of the French army in the siege of Sebastopol. Marshal PELISSIER was in his 70th year at the time of his death, having been born near Rouen, in 1794. After completing his military studies at St. Cyr, he was gazetted a Sal-Lieutenant in 1815. Subsequently he saw service in Spain in 1823, achieved the rank of Captain in 1828, served in Greece and afterward in Algeria up to 1832, when he returned to France for the recruitment of his health. In 1839 he returned to Algeria, where he remained in active service for a period of 16 years, and it was during this period of his career that his name was first given to the world, and in a character which was long regarded as infamous. A vicifously hostile tribe of Arabs made themselves conspicuous in their resistance to French authority during the insurrection of 1845. Occupying mountain fastnesses almost impenetrable to the foreign soldier, these tribes were enabled for a long time to harrass the French troops, and to openly defy effective chastisement in return. An expedient—of which it is not known whether PELISSIER was the actual author—was devised to smoke the Arabs out of their caves, or burn them alive in their retreats if they refused to surrender. Defiance was the only answer of the mountain chiefs to the threat of the French commanding officer, although it is said a large portion of the mountain warriors were willing to surrender. Be this as it may, their delay in listening to the summons determined their fate. PELISSIER ordered the faggots to be applied to the mouths of the Cauerus, and 600 of the wretched Arabs were thus consigned to a horrible and barbarous death. Various have been the palliations offered for the act, and it may be hoped there were reasons for it sufficient to relieve the perpetrators, at least, of the charge of wanton murder. The act was condemned by the French Minister of War. PELISSIER, however, was not removed from his post in Algeria, but remained there till after the outbreak of the Crimean war, when he was appointed second in command to Gen. CANROBERT. On the 19th of May, 1855, he became Commander-in-Chief of the French force in the Crimea, and his successful storming of the Malakoff, led to the evacuation of the main Sebastopol forts by the Russians, and ultimately to negotiations which ended in peace. Gen. PELISSIER became a Marshal of France and Duke of Malakoff, with a high pension, as the reward of his services, by his own government. At the hands of her Britanic Majesty he received the decoration of a Knight's Grand Cross; and was subsequently for a short time Minister to England in 1858.

Court Notice.

SUPERIOR COURT—PART II.

Before Judge McCunn.

The jurors summoned to attend yesterday morning, June 6, 1864, in this branch of the court, who failed to appear and answer to their names were fined $25 each for non-attendance.

George the Count Joannes Adjudged to be a Non-Resident.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Justice Cardozo.

George the Count Joannes vs. John Clancy.—This is an action wherein $20,000 damages is claimed for an alleged libel. Defendant made a motion that plaintiff be compelled to file security for his costs on the ground that he is a non-resident.

CARDOZO, J.—I think the plaintiff must be required to give security for costs as a non-resident. I am aware that he means that he has become a resident of this City, but his affidavit as well as the statement in open court before me concedes that at all events until recently he was a resident of Boston in the State of Massachusetts. I think he ought to have shown under these circumstances when and how he effected a change of residence in order that the court and not he may determine whether he has in fact and in good faith become a resident of this City, and that his general oath to that conclusion is not enough.

Motion that the plaintiff file security for costs, and that his proceedings in this action be stayed in the meantime, granted with $10 costs to the defendant. Paintiff in person; T. C. Fields for defendant.

Arrest and Bail—Privilege from Arrest Waived by Justification of Bail.

COMMON PLEAS—GENERAL TERM.

Before Judges Daly, Brady and Cardozo.

Petrie vs. Fitzgerald—The defendant in this action was arrested on the 3d of November, 1863, which was a day designated for general election. Claiming exemption as an elector, he caused a notice to be served of a motion to be made for his discharge from arrest, and to declare the service of the process upon him invalid. An order was obtained by plaintiff's counsel requiring the defendants' attendance on a certain day for examination, as to the question of his citizenship and whether or not there were any circumstances rendering it impossible that he could legally exercise his right of franchise on the day of service. The defendant was accordingly subpœned, and having temporarily been absent in New-Jersey, the subpœna was served upon him in that State. Upon examination it turned out to the satisfaction of plaintiff's counsel that neither the arrest nor the service of process were legal, and an order declaratory thereof was entered, plaintiff paying the costs granted defendant's counsel by the court.

The defendant then left the court-room, and before he had reasonable time sufficient to leave the City was again arrested in the same action.

The court below held that the defendant could be arrested the second time, and denied his application to be discharged on that ground, and for the further reason that he was privileged from arrest at the time the second arrest was made, he being in attendance at court in obedience to its process, and as a suitor. Upon the appeal, which was argued in February last, the court affirmed the order holding that after the defendant gave the undertaking, if he did not intend to waive his bail, he should have moved for his discharge—that he was privileged from arrest as a suitor necessarily attending in court, but not as a witness attending in obedience to illegal process, but that it was a temporary right which did not shield him longer than it continued, and that the forfeiting of his bail was an idle ceremony, unless he intended to submit to his arrest as proper.

J. Solis Rittesband for appellant. Barrett, Brinsmade and Barrett for respondent.

The Express Case.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS—TRIAL TERM.

Before Judge Brady.

Stephen T. Clark vs. James Brooks et. al.—At the opening of the court this morning Judge BRADY called the calendar through. Mr. Cram said if your Honor please the case of Clark against Brooks has not been called.

Judge Brady—That case has been transferred to the other room.

Mr. Cram—If your Honor please I object to that.

Judge Brady—It is too late to object now; it is done; you will have to go in there.

Mr. Cram—With all due respect I ask the court to tell by whose order the case was transferred.

Judge Brady—It was made by me as a matter of courtesy to my associate.

Mr. Cram said that he had received no notice of this, and asked if it had been placed on the general calendar or the day calendar. He said that he should make a motion to have it put back, and then he would have this case tried in the other branch of the court. Counsel for the defendants were not present. On going into the other branch, before Judge Cardozo, plaintiff's counsel found that the case had not yet been placed on the day calendar, and the court had adjourned until Wednesday.

Certiorari in the Tax Commissioners' Case.

SUPREME COURT—GENERAL TERM.

Before Justices Leonard, Clerke and Sutherland.

The People ex rel. Jonathan W. Allen vs. The Board of Taxes and Assessments.—This was the return day to a writ of certiorari granted on Saturday by Justice LEONARD. Ex-Judge Allen stated that it was absolutely necessary that all delay should be avoided. A new assessment was to be made, and as yet the books and papers of the office had not been found. They were willing to submit the case without argument to-day. Mr. McKEON said that they had not seen the opinion yet, and that they desired to have it set down for an early day.

The court set it down for to-day, at 10 o'clock.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES.

MADAME PUTNAM'S
PATENT STOCKING SUPPORTER,

an invention designed to promote the comfort of ladies and children, by doing away with the old method of supporting the stocking by means of an elastic or garter, the injurious effects of which every lady is assured. This new supporter leaves the limbs entirely free, and allows the blood full circulation. It is more easily adjusted and more durable than the common garter. It is peculiarly adapted for children, as it cannot possibly get out of place. Ladies are requested to call and examine the article for themselves.

NEW SKIRT FOR 1864.

A NEW AND GREAT INVENTION IN HOOP SKIRTS.

THE DUPLEX ELLIPTIC (OR DOUBLE) STEEL SPRING.

J. I. & J. O. WEST, NO. 97 CHAMBERS-ST., NEW YORK,

Are the owners of the patent and exclusive manufacturers of this,

J. W. BRADLEY'S
PATENTED DUPLEX ELLIPTIC STEEL SPRING SKIRTS.

This invention consists of Duplex (or two) Elliptic Steel Springs, ingeniously braided tightly and firmly together, edge to edge, making the toughest, most elastic, flexible and durable spring ever used, enabling the wearer, in consequence of its great elasticity and flexibleness, to place and fold the skirt when in use as easily and with the same convenience as a silk or muslin dress. It entirely obviates and silences the only objections to hoop skirts, viz.: the annoyance to the wearer as well as the public, especially in crowded assemblies, carriages, railroad cars, church pews, or in any crowded place from the difficulty of contracting them or occupying a small space. This entirely removes the difficulty, while giving the skirt the usual full and symmetrical form, and is the lightest and most stylish and graceful appearance for the street, opera, promenade or house dress. A lady having enjoyed the pleasure, comfort and great convenience of wearing the Duplex Elliptic Spring Skirt for a single day, will never afterward willingly dispense with the use of them. They are the best quality in every part, and by far the lightest, most durable, comfortable and economical skirt made. Merchants will be supplied as above, and ladies in most first-class retail stores in this City and throughout the different States.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

The news from Gen. GRANT is up to yesterday. There was only skirmishing on Saturday, and no fighting on Sunday. Gen. GRANT says everything was going on well. Our forces still occupy their position within a few yards of the rebel lines, which were taken and retaken so rapidly on Friday morning. At Bottom's Bridge the rebels appeared to be fortifying on both sides of the river. We give from our special correspondent, this morning, full and thrilling details of the severe battle of Friday.

Gen. SHERMAN'S progress in Georgia is still onward. He has finally forced JOHNSTON from his position at Allatoona Creek, or New Hope Church, and was advancing upon Marietta, and had arrived within six miles of that place.

It is stated that information has been received by the brigantine Prince Alfred, which left Barbadoes on the 9th ult., that the English war-steamer Greyhound had been dispatched the day previous in search of the rebel steamer Florida. She had received sealed dispatches, which were not to be opened until the Florida was under the range of their guns. What can all this mean?

Information has been received in St. Louis of the recapture from the rebels of Dardenelles, on the Arkansas river, by a Federal force under Col. CLOUD, of the Second Kansas Infantry. The place was reoccupied by the loyal troops on the 24th ult. The city, it will be recollected, was captured in the early part of May by a rebel force numbering 3,000, under SHELBY, the U. S. Commissary stores having been previously thrown into the river and destroyed by the Federal troops.

FROM EUROPE.

By three arrivals we have English and European news one week later. The steamship Virginia, which sailed from Liverpool on the 24th of May and Queenstown on the 25th, and the Etna, (of the Inman line,) which left Liverpool on the 25th and Queenstown on the 26th, arrived at this port yesterday. The China, (of the Cunard line,) which appears to have taken the place of the Europa, reached Halifax late on Sunday night, one week out from Queenstown, thus bringing the news down to the 29th of May. The news of the great battles of the Wilderness and Spottsylvania had created a most profound sensation, especially in England, as will be seen from the comments of the London Times, which we publish elsewhere. The qualities of Gen. GRANT as a commander are the subject of high eulogium even in the Anglo-rebel papers. The privateer Georgia is announced for sale at Liverpool by private treaty. The pirates of the J. G. Gerity were before the Court of Queen's Bench on a writ of habeas corpus, and were discharged—the Chief Justice, however, dissenting from the majority of the Court. The news which was carried to Europe by the City of Washington respecting the progress of the campaign, was generally regarded as exceedingly disastrous to the rebel cause, and the rebel cotton loan had declined, thereupon, I rom 5 to 6 ₱ cent. The British ministry have taken a practical way of getting at the bottom of the difficulty respecting LAIRD'S rebel rams: they have been purchased on Government account. It is not stated whether the executors of the late Pasha of Egypt or LAIRD himself gets the purchase money. The Derby was won by Blair Athole, Gen. Peel, second, and Scottish Chief, third. The Dano-German Conference had been holding intermittent sessions, but had come to no definite decision on the question. Various unofficial reports are given. Among others, that the British Government had agreed to a plebiscite in Schleswig. This is improbable. Lord RUSSELL had made the important announcement in the House of Lords that the Queen was no wise an obstacle in the way of giving effect to the Government policy, but cheerfully followed the advice of her responsible ministers. The Emperor and Empress of the French were about to pay a visit to the King of Prussia. The Pope continues seriously ill. The death of the Duke of Malakoff is announced. We publish an obituary notice of the late Marshal in another column.

GENERAL NEWS.

The Board of Aldermen met yesterday. A resolution providing for a celebration of the ensuing 4th of July, with an appropriation in blank, was introduced and laid over. The Comptroller reported a balance of $1,950,932 49 in the City Treasury on last Saturday. The Board concurred to give a stand of colors to the Ninety-third Regiment, N. Y. S. N. G. Beyond this the proceedings were uninteresting. The Board adjourned to 12 M. on next Monday.

The Board of Councilmen adopted a resolution directing the Hudson River Railroad Company to lay the Belgian pavement in West-street. By their charter this company are required to pave the streets where their tracks are laid. Some general business was transacted, and the Board adjourned to Thursday, at 2 o'clock P. M.

In the Court of General Sessions, yesterday, the Grand Jury was impanneled and the gentlemen summoned as jurors were discharged until Monday next. Mr. CLANCY, editor of the Leader, made application to have his trial for libel on complaint of GEORGE, the Count JOANNES, brought on at an early day. Monday, the 20th of June, was set apart by the court for this case. MARIA BANDAN, an old and notorious shop-lifter, was tried and convicted of stealing goods from LORD & TAYLOR'S store. She was sent to the State Prison for two years.

The annual election of officers of the New-York Commercial Association doing business at the Produce Exchange, was held yesterday. In consequence of this election, the new rule, restricting business hours at the Exchange to from 10 o'clock A. M., to 12:30, was not enforced. Yet business was practically over by the appointed hour for closing the Exchange, and everybody seemed quite pleased with the early adjournment reform, in view of the proximity of the "dog days."

The General Term of the Supreme Court yesterday affirmed the conviction of JAMES E. COOKE, the bounty-broker, and directed that he be remanded back to the Court of Sessions for sentence. It is generally understood and believed that the day after COOKE was let out on $1,500 bail, by order of Justice BARNARD, he took the cars for Montreal from whence he went to Europe.

A meeting was held at Princeton, Ill., on the 1st inst., to organize an Owen Lovejoy Association, the object of which is to raise funds to erect a suitable monument to the memory of the late OWEN LOVEJOY. After they had agreed upon a plan of organization and elected a full board of officers, the Chairman announced that over $5,000 had already been raised. It is estimated that $6,000 will be required, two-thirds of which will probably be raised in that Congressional District.

At a meeting of the retail boot and shoe dealers held at the Cooper Institute last night, it was unanimously resolved that hereafter those engaged in this trade should pledge themselves to close their stores at 7 o'clock in the evening.

The Cattle market at Forty-fourth-street is supplied with 3,300 fresh bullocks—more than 700 above the receipts of last week. Sellers opened the sales at about the figures of the previous week; but, with the increased supply, butchers were slow to support such prices. Salesmen, who claimed that they had paid high, were slow to make much concession. As a result, the market continued slow, with an evident decline in prices in the lower grades of steers, if not in the better class. A considerable number will be left over. Extra cattle sold at 20c., or even above. The general selling prices were from 17c.@19c., estimated net weight. Sheep are in good demand—shorn sheep selling at 7¾c.@9½c., live weight; some at 7c. A medium lot of wool sheep was reported as sold at BROWNING'S for 11½c.

General business was active in only a few departments yesterday. A fair amount of Flour and Grain changed hands at, in the main, firmer prices, though the market closed less buoyantly. Provisions were in good request, but irregular in price. Groceries were quiet, as were also Cotton, Hops, Hides, Fish, Hemp, Metals, Oils and Tallow. Whisky was in demand and steady. Freights were rather more active.

The market for Stocks, yesterday, was rather more active than on Saturday, and some descriptions on the Railway and Miscellaneous lists were higher. Gold, 194. Money, 6@7 ₱ cent. Large deposits of Currency are being made in the Treasury Office on 6 ₱ cent. interest, at call.

The Acceptance of Fremont.

Of course FREMONT accepts. He laid the plot on purpose to accept. His griefs would run to seed if he did not accept. His "whole charge of ancients, corporals, lieutenants, gentlemen of companies, discarded unjust serving men, revolted tapsters," would all go to the dogs if he didn't accept. It is plainly enough now but an ill venture; yet, being in so far, there was no alternative but to stand to it.

It was needful not only to accept, but to give reasons. FREMONT has given them, in the letter we published yesterday. They are very vague. Words lie so thick about them that it is not easy to make them out. But we gather that his acceptance is necessary because Mr. LINCOLN has violated personal liberty, and the liberty of the press, and especially the right of asylum; because his foreign policy has been feeble and without principle; and because the war has been managed with incapacity and selfishness, with all "the abuses of military dictation, without its unity of action and vigor of execution." These, every one sees at once, are Copperhead reasons, pure and simple. They consist of exactly the stuff faction has been casting at President LINCOLN for the last two or three years, only a little staler. It is evident that FREMONT had his eye on the Copperheads while penning every line of this letter. He takes good care to lull their Pro-Slavery instincts, by declaring that "Slavery may be considered practically destroyed," and that "the party divisions created by it have disappeared." He gratifies their sympathetic feeling for the rebels by giving out that he "does not heartily concur" in that portion of the Cleveland platform which sets forth that "the confiscation of the lands of the rebels, and their distribution among the soldiers and actual settlers, is a measure of justice." Evidently he has a notion that there is a chance of his being taken up by the Chicago Convention. He does not hesitate to make direct allusion to it—saying that if Mr. LINCOLN is renominated, "there will remain no alternative but to organize against him every element of conscientious opposition, with the view to prevent the misfortune of his reëlection." Impressed with this necessity, this brilliant patriot realizes the importance of standing well with the Copperheads.

FREMONT'S prating about the violation of "the ordinary rights secured by the Constitution and the laws of the country" is all the more absurd when his own summary arrests and suppression of newspapers, with which he began his rule in Missouri, are recalled, and particularly the famous martial law Proclamation with which he closed that memorable Summer. Without the shadow of authority, either from his military superiors or from public law, he assumed, in that extraordinary edict, to confiscate all "property real and personal, of all persons in the State of Missouri who shall take up arms against the United States, or who shall be directly proven to have taken an active part with their armies in the field." Gov. GAMBLE had previously issued a proclamation, granting amnesty to those who had been indiscreet enough to take up arms under JACKSON'S call, and who would return to their duty as good citizens. This amnesty by the civil authority of the State was wantonly set aside. The act of Congress limited the penalty of confiscation to property actually employed in the service of the rebellion, with the knowledge and consent of its owners. FREMONT, in utter disregard of that law, proclaimed that the property of rebels, whether used in support of the rebellion or not, should be confiscated, and that all slaves should be emancipated. So arbitrary an assumption of power has not been witnessed in this war. As respects the civil aspects of the case, it was sheer usurpation in FREMONT to attempt to override the law of Congress on confiscation, which had recently been enacted after full deliberation. As respects its military bearings, it was an endeavor to arrogate the functions of the President, who, under the Constitution, is the responsible military head of the country. Though FREMONT might have communicated with the President in half an hour, he gave him not the slightest inkling of his purpose to make this stupendous change in the previous military policy under which all of our Commanders had acted. He took upon himself authority to sequester and abolish property to the extent of hundreds of millions of dollars, with no more right in the premises, either civil or military, than the Dey of Algiers. He did this, too, not in a State which had pretended to cut loose from the Constitution by secession, but in a State which yet claimed to be loyal, and which was under the control of a loyal Governor, and a loyal constitutional convention of the people duly elected. These facts are matters of history. Every American knows them. Yet, in the very face of them, FREMONT joins the Copperheads in abusing the President for violating "the ordinary rights secured by the Constitution and the laws of the country." It is almost incredible impudence.

Gen. FREMONT by this letter breaks definitively with the Union party. We are sorry for it. Not for the party's sake, but for his own. The party is sure to prevail. It will not feel his loss. But it is not pleasant to reflect that a name which was once peculiarly associated with a grand struggle against the slave power in the political field should now be connected with a movement tending only to encourage that power, when in flagrant rebellion. The wish of Gen. FREMONT is to draw off a portion of the Union party to his own support—in other words to divide it. No extensive division could take place without neutralizing its power, and giving the next Presidency to the party which is opposed to the war, and in favor of negotiating with JEFF. DAVIS—the party for whose success the rebels have a special solicitude. The spirit must come either from hostility to the aims and objects of the Union party, or from a personal feeling against Mr. LINCOLN. If the former, JOHN C. FREMONT is ex animo a Copperhead. If the latter, he is a man who permits his personal spites to overrule his public duties. The special anti-Lincoln tone of his letter, his expressed willingness to support any other nominee of the Baltimore Convention, indicates that the latter branch of the alternative is the correct one. This conclusion finds an additional support in the fact that he has once proved himself capable of this same littleness of action. When Gen. POPE was transferred to the Department of Northern Virginia, Gen. FREMONT, though in the face of the enemy, refused to retain his command in the Mountain Department, for the avowed reasons that his personal relations with Gen. POPE were such that he could not acknowledge the latter as his military superior. It was a display of personal spleen of which a true soldier would be incapable. A similar grudge against President LINCOLN seems to be his ruling motive now. But whether it be this or a new-born hatred of the Union cause that impels him, he is alike dishonored. The impotence of his effort does not make it a whit the less odious.

Friday's Battle.

The battle of Friday last was a much more serious affair, both in its original conception, its actual character, and its final consequences, than we had been led to believe from the brief dispatches heretofore given to the public. The intention really was that it should be the decisive battle of the campaign. The movements of the preceding days, culminating in the possession of Cold Harbor—an important strategic point—had drawn our lines close in front of the Chickahominy, and reduced the military problem to the forcing of the passage of that river—a problem which, if solved in our favor, would decide whether Richmond could be carried by a coup de main, if a decisive victory should attend our arms, or, whether operations would settle down to a siege in form. The great struggle did not result in a success; and though the enemy's lines were carried and temporarily held at two important points, our assaulting columns were finally compelled to abandon them. Probably no action so important in its character was ever crowded into so brief a space of time—ten terrible minutes in the early dawn developed on the part of the enemy such strength both of position and force as to carry conviction that any victory that could here be achieved would be purchased at too great a cost.

All that matchless valor directed by consummate skill could do, was done; but it was in vain. In falling back, however, the army was far from abandoning all the ground it had gained. It held and stills holds the enemy with unrelaxing clutch. Even now, our lines are in many places within fifty yards of the enemy's works on the Chickahominy, and while it is not clear how Gen. GRANT can again make an advance on his immediate front, it will be equally difficult for LEE to make his escape. The situation is such that there will necessarily now be very important movements on the part of our army.

We present to the country this morning a very full view, military as well as popular, of this important action of Friday last, from the pen of the gentleman who has photographed in this journal so many of the great operations of the war. It is of the deepest interest to the army and the general public.

THE DANISH WAR LOSSES.—It is doubtful whether the losses suffered by the Danish army since the outbreak of the war with Germany, have ever been paralleled—looking at the strength of the army when it accepted the gauge thrown down to it. The estimates are various as to the numbers of the Danish force, including the volunteers that have taken up arms in defence of the independence of the country. But the regularly disciplined force of the Kingdom—the army proper—does not appear to have exceeded 35,000 at the commencement of hostilities. The official reports, then, show that half this force has disappeared in the bloody conflicts, from Flensburg to Duppel and Viele. In short, the Danes have lost 16,473 men, including 800 officers, besides 467 guns. The continuance of the unequal war at such a sacrifice can not surely be permitted by the intervening Powers.

THE NATIONAL UNION CONVENTION.

Assembling of the Delegates at Baltimore.

PREPARATIONS FOR TO-DAY.

BALTIMORE, Monday, June 6.

A meeting of the Ohio delegation was held to-night, and was addressed by Govs. DENNISON and TOD, who strongly urged the renomination of President LINCOLN.

The Rev. Dr. BRECKINRIDGE will be temporary chairman of the convention.

A deputation from the War Democratic State Committee of New-York, of which the Hon. GEORGE A. BRANDRETH is Chairman, is holding a levee at Barnum's Hotel, and the members are pressing the name of Hon. DANIEL S. DICKINSON for the Vice-Presidency.

The American Telegraph Company have placed several instruments in the theatre to facilitate the transmission of the proceedings of the convention to the press throughout the country.

BALTIMORE, Monday, June 6.

The city is becoming quite lively with the gathering throng. The Eutaw House and Barnum's Hotel have been selected as the headquarters by the various States.

The Ohio delegation hung out their flag at BARNUM'S this morning. A white flag with tri-color border, bearing the inscription, "Ohio True to the Union." At the Eutaw House, the headquarters of the National Executive Committee, a large canvass banner is suspended, bearing the name of ABRAHAM LINCOLN, for the next Presidency. The names most prominently mentioned for President of the convention, are Mr. DENNISON, of Ohio, Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania, and Mr. RAYMOND, of New-York.

Amusements.

OLYMPIC THEATRE.—The old but still youthful romantic and spectacular drama of "Aladdin, or the Wonderful Lamp," was revived here last night; not the burlesque, be it understood, but the genuine Arabian story, with all its bathos and beautiful visions of fairy land as of old—a spectacle recalling youth and the rosy paths of juvenile reading. The piece is intended, we suppose, to run through the Summer season. No other justification can be offered for the lavish way in which it has been placed upon the stage. The dialogue is not interesting; the situations are not what they might be under the new sensation dispensation; but the story is preserved in a familiar way, and the gladness of boyhood comes back to us in hearing it told anew. We have no recollection of ever having seen "Aladdin" more beautifully put on the stage. From the first scene to the last (which did not work) it was a charming vision of Eastern land. The costumes were rich, appropriate and correct. When we have said this we have exhausted the subject. The acting was of course all that could be desired, Mrs. JOHN WOOD and her company being infinitely superior to any requirements that may be made upon them in such a work. It must be noticed, however, that at least one of the leading artists was not perfect in her text, and, in fact, incurred the ridicule of the gallery by seeming to need the vociferous hints of the prompter. The stage carpenters, too, were dilatory in their business, and caused delays, which were resented in the usual way. Owing to these untoward circumstances—which will undoubtedly be remedied to-night—we are unable to record the verdict of the house, but we are disposed to regard "Aladdin" as a work which will gain steadily in favor, and on the positive merits of its scenery and dresses, become the rage.

REBEL ACCOUNTS.

GEN. LEE'S ARMY.

Correspondence of the Richmond Examiner.

ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,
NEAR MECHANICSVILLE, Tuesday May 31, 1864.

GRANT'S army crossed the Pamunky on Saturday and snowed itself on our front on Sunday evening, at which time our men, after resting in bivouac during Saturday night, formed in line of battle with our left resting near Atlee's Station, and our right extending to and across the Mechanicsville pike, about eight or nine miles out from Richmond. What forces were thus put in line it is not now prudential to say. Some skirmishing occurred on Sunday evening and again yesterday morning. Yesterday evening about 3 o'clock Gen. LEE directed Major-Gen. EARLY to take with him the divisions of RODES and his own, and feel the enemy's position for the purpose of determining his presence and strength. Our boys moved forward from their works with a hearty good will, and after proceeding a short distance encountered the enemy's line of skirmishers, which were speedily driven in upon their line of battle, and, in turn, their line of battle was pressed back fully one and a half miles, the enemy leaving their dead and some forty of their wounded on the field to be cared for by us.

At length the enemy, in falling back, reached their outer line of works, which was very strong. Behind these they sought safety, and up to these our brave boys charged, but were unable, owing to the strength of the position to dislodge the enemy and were compelled finally to give back—having successfully ascertained that the enemy were posted at this point, (which is near Bethseda Church, a little to the left of the Mechanicsville pike,) in force behind strong intrenchments. Our losses in this affair will reach 300 wounded, and perhaps 50 killed. The loss of the enemy is believed to be as great, if not larger. The enemy also have to count among their losses about 130 prisoners from WARREN'S Fifth Corps and AUGUR'S Heavy Artillerymen.

Among the gallant braves who fell in this evening's fight I am pained to publish the name of the gallant Col. WILLIS, of the Twelfth Georgia Regiment. At the time he fell mortally wounded, he had just been assigned temporarily to the command of PEGRAM'S Brigade, and was about to lead it into action. He possessed every quality of head and heart that constitute the skillful officer and accomplished gentleman. Col. JAMES B. TERRILL next took command of PEGRAM'S gallant brigade, and led it right up to the enemy's works, where he fell mortally wounded, his body remaining in the enemy's hands. Col. GIBSON, of the Forty-ninth Virginia, was also severely wounded, and Maj. SMITH, Forty-fifth North Carolina, was mortally wounded and has since died. This affair, altogether, was profitable to the extent of ascertaining the enemy's position and strength. Our men finding it impossible to do more, at length retired to their works from which they had sallied forth.

Early this morning Capt. PRATT, Quartermaster of the Sixth Army Corp (now commanded by WALKER) by mistake rode into our lines, and is now a prisoner of war. He is very anxious for a special exchange.

About noon there was heavy cannonding and sharp skirmishing in front of Breckinride and Mahone, and as I write I have just learned that the enemy, between 2 and 4 o'clock, opened heavy cannonading in front of WILCOX, and then advanced upon his front in three columns. A vigorous fight, lasting over two hours, is reported to have occurred, resulting in the repulse of the enemy with a loss to us of 150 in killed and wounded.

The enemy are busy intrenching, and on some parts of our line they are not more than four hundred yards distant. GRANT'S inactivity is supposed to arise from the fact that he is awaiting the arrival of BUTLER'S reinforcements. It was said late this evening that GRANT was moving to our right, for the purpose, it was hinted, of getting nearer the York River Railroad. IVANHOE.

DISPATCHES FROM GEN. LEE'S ARMY.

STOER'S FARM, Tuesday, May 31.

BATTLES' and DANIEL'S brigades, yesterday evening, flanked the line of the enemy's skirmishers, capturing one hundred and twenty-five prisoners from the Fifth Corps, who have been received here.

Some heavy firing on our left this morning, the cause of which is not explained.

SECOND DISPATCH.

BATTLE-GROUND, NEAR MECHANICSVILLE,
Tuesday, May 31—6 P. M.

Yesterday evening, about 3 o'clock, there was a considerable engagement between a portion of EARLY'S and RHODES'S divisions, of EWELL'S corps, and the Fifth Corps of the Yankee army. The fight lasted about two hours. We drove the enemy back about a mile and a half, until they reached a strongly intrenched line of works, from which it was impossible to dislodge them.

We attacked the enemy for the purpose of discovering his position, and found him strongly massed and intrenched on our right.

The fight occurred near Bethesda Church, on the Mechanicsville road, about nine miles from Richmond. Our loss was about 300 wounded and 50 killed. Among the former are Col. WILLIS, of the Twelfth Georgia, and Major SMITH, of the Forty-fifth North Carolina. Among the former is Col. TERRELL, Thirteenth Virginia, mortally wounded and left in front of the enemy's works. We captured about 130 prisoners.

The enemy's loss in killed and wounded is supposed to be heavier than ours.

To-day there has been heavy cannonading and sharp skirmishing in MAHONE'S front, but no general engagement.

It is supposed that the enemy is still moving toward our right, so as to cover and use the York River Railroad.

FROM NORTH GEORGIA.

NEW-HOPE, May 30, via MARIETTA, May 31.

Scarcely a shot was fired yesterday or to-day. Both armies are taking advantage of the temporary lull to enjoy the rest thus afforded after the fatigue of the last thirty days. The weather is very warm, and the dust insupportable. Small squads of prisoners continue to come in. About five hundred have been captured so far.

Arrival of the Steamer Bermuda, at Philadelphia, with Wounded Officers and Men on Board.

PHILADELPHIA, Monday, June 6.

The steamer Bermuda has arrived from the West Blockading Squadron. She brings nineteen officers and thirty-six discharged and disabled men. Spoke United States ship Hartford, on a cruise. Spoke at sea schooner Dart, from New-Orleans with fifty passengers, disabled, and was towed to the Southwest Pass.

On her voyage north she captured the blockade-running sloop Fortunate, off Indian River, Florida, loaded with cotton.

On the 1st inst., an English blockade-running steamer was sighted, and the Bermuda chased her over one hundred and twenty miles, but in the darkness of the succeeding night she escaped after the Bermuda had been near enough to open fire upon her. It is supposed the blockade-runner would attempt to make for Wilmington, N. C. As the Bermuda had broken one of her propellers she could not make her usual speed in the chase. The escape of the steamer was undoubtedly owing to this fact. The Bermuda will be repaired in ten weeks, and will be again ready to depart.

The War in the Southwest.

CAIRO, Sunday, June 5.

The steamer Missouri, from New-Orleans 30th, has arrived. She was fired into at Columbia by a battery. Sixty shots were fired at her, eight of which struck. One shell exploded in the nursery cabin, wounding a lady in the foot. No other person was wounded.

Most of the boats burned at New-Orleans were owned by the Government. The loss is estimated at $250,000. The fire is believed to have been the work of an incendiary.

There was a fair inquiry for Cotton at full prices; good ordinary, 80c.; low middling, 83c. There is nothing doing in sugar and molasses.

The steamer Graham, from Memphis 3d, arrived this morning.

Gen. CANBY was actively engaged in organizing his forces, and is nearly ready for defensive operations.

The steamer Kennett, from White River, reports all quiet in that direction.

Pines Bluff and Duvall's Bluff were garrisoned with forces amply sufficient to repel any attack likely to be made by the enemy in that vicinity.

The Memphis Cotton market was flat; stock on hand only 400 bales. All offered is nearly taken; Strict Middling, 92c.@93c.; Good, 94c.@95c.; Fair, 91.

Cavalry Fight With Roddy—Death of the Rebel Col. Johnson.

LOUISVILLE, Sunday, June 5.

Col. LONG, commanding the cavalry of the Seventeenth Army Corps, recently encountered RODDY'S cavalry, under the command of Col. JOHNSON, at Molten, Ala. JOHNSON and several others were killed and many prisoners were captured.

Col. JOHNSON was a prominent man in RODDY'S command, standing in relation to Gen. RODDY as BASIL DUKE did to JOHN MORGAN.

The Salem, Ark., Guerrilla Story Untrue.

ST. LOUIS, Monday, June 6.

A dispatch to headquarters from Rolla says: "The report of the burning of a train and the killing of a number of refugees near Salem, Ark., by a party of guerrillas proves to be unfounded, a portion of the men sent out to look after the train having arrived there.

The Draft.

BUFFALO, Monday, June 6.

A draft for Erie County is ordered for Thursday, June 9. The quota for the county has, however, been nearly filled by enlistments.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

Special Dispatches to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Monday, June 6.

MEXICAN AFFAIRS.

Mr. CORWIN, since his arrival here, has had several interviews with the President and Secretary of State in reference to Mexican affairs. Could his correspondence, which is on file in the State Department, be permitted to see the light of day, it would show that he not only fully understood from the beginning the designs of NAPOLEON, but that he earnestly protested against them, and had his advice been followed, we would have been saved the humiliating spectacle of seeing our land of Republican institutions flanked by a monarchy, and ruled by a European despot.

INVALID CORPS.

The Senate Military Committee have under consideration the question of reorganizing the Invalid Corps. They will make a thorough investigation of many complaints which have been made against this corps on the ground of its inefficiency, &c.

THE TAX BILL.

The Finance Committee of the Senate have resolved to set apart Wednesday next for consideration of the Tariff Bill. Many and radical changes, it is expected, will be made, as the bill as it passed the House is crude and imperfect.

BALTIMORE CONVENTION.

The Baltimore Convention, which assembles to-morrow, is the main topic of conversation here to-night. GRANT and his army, if not entirely lost sight of at present, at least ceases to be talked of. Every Unionist here feels that the renomination and consequent reëlection of ABRAHAM LINCOLN, in its moral effect will be worth to the Union cause an army of half a million men, and will insure the speedy suppression of the rebellion.

WASHINGTON, Monday, June 6—12 Midnight.

GEN. TYLER AND HIS AIDS.

Gen. TYLER, who was wounded on Friday, in the assault on the enemy's intrenchments in front of Richmond, arrived here to-day. It is feared that amputation will be necessary. Three Aids, Capt. SCHELLER, Lieuts. KINNEY and OWENS, who were wounded on the same day, have also arrived.

CONTRABANDS.

Several hundred more contrabands from White House arrived here to-night.

WOUNDED.

Several thousand wounded are expected to arrive here to-morrow and next day, from White House. Ample preparations have been made for their comfortable reception by Surgeon-General BARNES, assisted by the Sanitary and Christian Commissions.

SUPPLIES.

Supplies of all kinds are being rapidly sent to the front. The Sanitary and Christian Commissions have an abundance of everything necessary for the wounded both at their depots, at White House and at Washington.

DISMISSAL.

Col. LEWIS M. PECK, of the One Hundred and Seventy-third New-York, by order of Gen. BANKS, has been dismissed the service.

MORE ONE HUNDRED DAY MEN WANTED.

It is rumored to-night that the President is being urged by prominent Senators ann Members of Congress to call out immediately five hundred thousand one hundred day men to assist in the capture of Richmond. The enthusiastic legislators, who profess to be acquainted with the temper of the Northern masses, say that number of men could be raised, armed and equipped within twenty days.

KILLED ON FRIDAY.

The bodies of Col. MORRIS, Sixty-eighth New-York Col. DRAKE, One Hundred and Twelfth New-York, Col. MCCONIHE, One Hundred and Sixty-ninth New-York, Col. PRESTON, First Vermont, Col. MOODY and Capt. CUSHMAN, arrived here this afternoon from White House. All were killed in Friday's engagement.

REINFORCEMENTS TO GRANT.

Thousands of reinforcements are being sent to Gen. GRANT. A gentleman, who just arrived from White House, says that transports laden with troops were continually arriving there. Supplies of all kinds were abundant.

GEN. HURLBURT.

Gen. HURLBURT, formerly in command of the Sixteenth Army Corps, is here. He will probably be assigned to a command under Gen. GRANT.

GEN. LEE NOT WOUNDED.

The story of Gen. LEE being wounded is undoubtedly untrue, as information from the front as late as Sunday morning fails to give the slightest intimation of any such deeply-to-be-wished occurrence.

WINTER DAVIS ON DIPLOMACY.

WINTER DAVIS has sent abroad advance copies of his report from the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, attacking the diplomatic policy of the Administration, as he construed, by the aid of Copperhead votes, to get permission to report it by the requisite two-third vote. But while the Copperheads were disposed to aid him in throwing firebrands, only three Administration members vote aye, and he actually lacked twelve votes of a majority, much less two-thirds.

THE BANKRUPT BILL.

The Bankrupt Bill is to be brought up in the House to-morrow for a vote, but as many of its friends will be absent its fate is doubtful.

THE TAX BILL PASSED BY THE SENATE.

The Senate persisted in passing the Tax Bill to-night, although they had to endure two tirades from GARRETT DAVIS on the Slavery question, and only managed to keep the required quorum together until 10 o'clock, when the vote was taken. It differs from the House bill, and the Committee of Conference will find it a difficult task to reconcile the disagreements satisfactorily. The estimated revenue to be collected under it is $250,000,000 per annum.

PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Monday, June 6.

SLAVE TRADE IN CUBA.

On motion of Mr. SUMNER, of Massachusetts, (Union,) it was

Resolved, That the President of the United States be requested, if not incompatible with the public interests, to communicate to the Senate any information in his possession concerning the present condition of the slave trade in Cuba, and what efforts are being made for its suppression.

THE SHIP CANAL FROM GREEN BAY, WIS.

The bill donating 100,000 acres of land to the State of Wisconsin, to aid in constructing the ship canal from Green Bay to Lake Michigan, was passed.

THE TAX BILL.

The Internal Revenue Bill came up in order, and the clause in the old bill establishing collection districts according to the basis of representation in Congress was proposed by Mr. COLLAMER, in lieu of the Senate's amendment, and adopted.

An amendment of Mr. MORGAN, making a tax on passage tickets of $300, fifty cents, and on passage tickets of $25 to $100 one dollar, was adopted.

LAND AID TO RAILROADS.

Mr. HENDRICKS, of California, (Dem.,) from the Committee on Public Lands, reported a bill for a railroad land grant to the Territories of Dacotah and Montana, with a recommendation that it be postponed until the next session, as the committee could not give it due attention. Agreed to.

THE SLAVE TRADE IN CUBA.

Mr. SUMNER, of Massachusetts, (Union,) offered a resolution, which was agreed to, requesting the President, if not incompatible with public interest, to communicate any recent information he has in relation to the Slave-trade in Cuba and what efforts have been made for its suppression.

THE ARMY REGISTER.

On motion of Mr. ANTHONY, of Rhode Island, (Union,) a resolution was agreed to to print five thousand additional copies of the army register for the use of the Senate.

Mr. CARLILE, of Virginia, (Dem.,) called up the bill to grant lands to Wisconsin to aid in the construction of a ship canal, from the head of Green Bay to Lake Michigan. It grants 100,000 acres of land for the purpose.

Mr. DOOLITTLE said the canal would be about one mile and a half long, and would save over one hundred and fifty miles of navigation in the round trip from Chicago.

The bill was passed.

THE INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. FESSENDEN, of Maine, (Union,) from the Finance Committee, reported back the Indian appropriation bill from the House.

THE REVENUE BILL.

The consideration of the International Revenue Bill was then resumed. The pending question was on Mr. COLLAMER'S amendment to the seventh section, as amended by the Senate, apportioning the number of assessors and collectors according to the basis of representation of the State in Congress instead of allowing their appointment by districts, set off at the discretion of the President, &c.

The amendment was adopted.

On motion of Mr. MORGAN the stamp duty of fifty cents on passage tickets as a foreign port was made to apply to tickets, cashing not exceeding thirty-five instead of thirty dollars, with the view of meeting the advance for second-class passengers; exceeding thirty-five and not exceeding fifty, the tax is one dollar.

The following, offered by Mr. MORGAN, was rejected:

No tax shall be imposed or collected from any hospital duly incorporated for the relief of the sick; provided the sick and disabled soldiers in the service of the United States or those who have been honorably discharged therefrom, shall be entitled to participate in the benefits of such institution gratuitously.

Mr. WILSON moved to put the tax on wood screws back to ten per cent. advalorem, as in the original House bill, instead of five per cent., as in the Senate amendment.

After some debate, in which the alleged excessive profits and monopoly of the Rhode Island Screw Company were referred to, the amendment was adopted—19 to 13.

Mr. WILSON moved a new section, imposing a stamp duty of ten cents on the sales of wares and merchandise of from $10 to $100, and one-quarter of one per cent. on sales of over $100.

Mr. WILSON thought this stamp duty would give us from twenty to twenty-five million of dollars.

The amendment was, after a discussion, rejected.

Mr. WILSON, of Massachusetts, (Union,) moved an amendment taxing incomes from $600 to $5,000 five per cent., and a duty of seven and a half per cent. on the excess over $5,000. Adopted, yeas 18, nays 9.

Mr. GRIMES, of Iowa, (Union,) moved that incomes over $15,000 be taxed ten per cent. on the excess. Agreed to.

Mr. SUMNER, of Massachusetts, (Union,) introduced an amendment, taxing leaf tobacco 25 cents per pound. Rejected.

An amendment of Mr. DAVIS, providing for the award and payment of losses sustained by loyal citizens during the war, was rejected.

An amendment of Mr. DAVIS, providing that no part of the revenue derived under the act shall be applied to the payment of negro troops, was pending at 4:30 when the Senate took a recess till 7 o'clock.

EVENING SESSION.

ASSAGE OF THE REVENUE BILL.

Mr. DAVIS, addressed the Senate against the employment of negro troops as impolitic and improper, and in opposition to the law of retaliation.

Mr. WILSON, in reply, read a letter from Adjutant-General THOMAS, recounting the services of the colored troops in the South and Southwest. Mr. WILSON deprecated the amendment at a time when every one would thank God if we had fifty thousand men to send to Gen. GRANT.

Mr. JOHNSON, of Missouri, (Union,) said that whatever might have been his opinion as to the propriety of employing these colored troops at first, he would be opposed to discharging them at the present crisis. He would have this rebellion put down by any force allowed by the rules of civilized warfare.

Mr. DAVIS said his amendment only proposed to take the arms from his hands and use him for laboring purposes. He would have the liabilments of soldiers taken from them and place them in the inferior position designed for them by nature.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. SUMNER moved to strike out the tax of five per cent. ad valorem on books, &c., except newspapers. Rejected, 8 to 19.

On motion of Mr. HENDERSON, the lines in the schedules of stamp duties from 190 to 212 inclusive, concerning warehouse receipts on merchandise, were stricken out and the following inserted: "When the merchandise does not exceed $500 in value, 10 cents; when not exceeding $1,000, 20 cents; and 20 cents for every additional $1,000."

The bill was then read the third time, and the ayes and noes were called for on its passage, when Mr. DAVIS rose and addressed the Senate on the finances of the Government at large, and Government indebtedness. He estimated that at the end of the fiscal year the public debt would be thirty-five hundred millions of dollars, with a necessity for the coming year of eleven hundred millions more.

The bill then passed; 23 to 3.

The nays were Messrs. DAVIS, HENDRICKS and POWELL.

The Senate at 10:25 adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Monday, June 6.

THE NORTHEASTERN FRONTIER.

On motion of Mr. RICE, of Maine, (Union,) the Select Committee on the subject of the defences of the Northeastern frontier was continued during the present Congress.

REPEAL OF FUGITIVE SLAVE ACTS.

Mr. HUBBARD, of Connecticut, (Union,) introduced a resolution instructing the Committee on the Ju-

...intary to report a bill repealing all acts and parts of acts for the rendition of fugitive slaves. Objection being made the resolution lies over.

PUNISHMENT OF GUERRILLAS.

Mr. GARFIELD, of Ohio, (Union,) from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported a bill for the more speedy punishment of guerrilla murderers, violators of laws and customs of war, and classes of persons, the sentences to be carried into effect by the Commanding Generals and Commanders of Departments. They have power to mitigate punishment to confinement in the Penitentiary, but not in cases of sentence of death or cashiering or dismissal of officers.

Mr. HENDRICK, of Wisconsin, (Dem.,) moved to lay the bill on the table. Disagreed to, 35 against 57.

Mr. LE BLOND, of Ohio, (Dem.,) asked why not have the bill printed, that all might examine its provisions.

Mr. GARFIELD said it was printed in the Globe two weeks ago.

Mr. DAWES, of Massachusetts, (Union,) wanted the gentlemen to state what objections they had to punishing guerrillas, who fire upon the unarmed men in ambulances, and lie in wait in ambush for our soldiers.

The bill was passed under operation of the previous question—72 against 37.

THE ARGUELLES CASE.

Mr. COX, of Ohio, (Dem.,) offered the following resolution:

That the recent extradition of a Spanish subject by the action of the Chief Executive of the United States, in the absence of a law or treaty on the subject, was in violation of the Constitution of the United States and of the law of nations, and in derogation of the right of asylum, which has ever been a distinguishing feature of our political system.

Mr. COX moved the previous question on its passage.

The motion was disagreed to—38 against 57.

Mr. COX moved to refer the resolution to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Disagreed to—41 against 60.

Mr. WASHBURNE, of Illinois, (Union,) said this was a case where a mob-stealer and slave-pirate was delivered up.

On motion of Mr. WILSON, of Iowa, (Union,) the resolution was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary; 72 against 46.

SUMMARY TRIALS FOR MINOR OFFENCES.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa, from the Judiciary Committee, reported back the Senate bill for the summary trial of minor offences against the United States, which was passed. It authorizes any Judge of any District Court of the United States to hold special sessions in cases relative to commercial marine. The sentence, on conviction, shall not be greater than imprisonment in jail for one year, or fine of $500, or both.

PURITY OF OFFICIALS.

Mr. WILSON, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported back the Senate bill which was passed, providing that no member of Congress shall, after his election and continuance in office, nor any head of department, or bureau, or clerk, shall receive or agree to receive any compensation, directly or indirectly, for any service rendered or to be rendered, either by himself or another, in proceedings relative to contracts, claims, charges or accusations, or other matters in which the United States is a party before any department or civil, military or naval commission. Any person thus offending shall, on conviction, be deemed to be guilty of a misdemeanor, and fined $10,000, with imprisonment not exceeding two years, at the discretion of the court, and shall be forever incapable of holding any office of honor or profit under the United States.

THE RESPONSIBILITY OF CONTRACTORS.

Mr. WILSON also reported the House bill placing contractors for supplies for the army and navy under the laws which relate to those branches of the public service, with a view to fix responsibility, and to impose penalties for improper conduct. The bill was passed.

PUNISHMENT OF COUNTERFEITING.

Mr. WILSON reported the House bill to prevent the sale, trade or exchange of any false or counterfeit coin, treasury notes or postal currency. The punishment on conviction to be a fine of $5,000, with hard labor for ten years, according to the aggravation of the offence. The bill was passed, and also a bill providing that the jurisdiction of the United States Court of Claims shall not extend to or include any claim caused by the destruction or appropriation of property by the army or naval forces engaged in the suppression of the rebellion, from the commencement to the close thereof.

The bill provides for the settlement by the proper officers of all claims of loyal citizens for commissary and quartermasters' stores actually furnished.

PURITY OF THE COURTS.

Mr. WILSON reported a bill to exclude all traitors and alien enemies from the civil courts of the United States and from the public lands. It was ordered to be printed and recommitted.

RENDITION OF FUGITIVE SLAVES.

Mr. MORRIS, of New-York, (Union,) introduced a bill to repeal all acts for the rendition of fugitive slaves.

Mr. MALLORY, of Kentucky, (Dem.,) said Kentucky was the only State in the Union as it stands in which Slavery was likely to continue, as Maryland, Missouri and Delaware had taken measures for its abolition. Such being the fact he desired an opportunity to offer an amendment to secure to Kentucky the benefit of that law.

Mr. MORRIS, who had moved the previous question on the bill said he would not further yield for such an amendment.

Mr. PENDLETON, of Ohio, (Dem.,) moved that the House adjourn.

Mr. STROUSE, of Pennsylvania, (Dem.,) moved that the House adjourn till Wednesday.

The Speaker stated the question to the House, when Mr. MALLORY said the chair did not state the whole motion. It was to allow the Speaker to attend the Baltimore Convention.

The Speaker replied the Chair does not expect to attend that convention, as he is not a delegate and his duties are here.

The House refused to adjourn till Wednesday—13 against 67.

Mr. PENDLETON's motion to adjourn till to-morrow was negatived—8 against 88.

Mr. HOLMAN, of Indiana, (Dem.,) moved that there be a call of the House, but this was disagreed to—28 against 73.

Mr. COX said the House could not this afternoon do justice to this bill, owing to the excitement incident to the Baltimore Convention. The Opposition would not consent to its passage. The repeal of the Fugitive slave Law was likely to aid the rebellion and JEFF. DAVIS.

Mr. HOLMAN suggested that the subject be opened for reasonable debate, which, after discussion, was agreed to unanimously. The bill will be the special order for Monday next.

THE MEXICAN QUESTION.

The House by a vote of 43 yeas against 55 nays, refused to suspend the rules in order that a report might be made from the Committee on Foreign Affairs relative to the action of the Executive on the subject of the establishment of a Monarchy in Mexico.

THANKS TO COL. BAILEY.

On motion of Mr. SLOAN, of Wisconsin, (Union,) the House took up and passed the Senate's joint resolution of thanks to Lieut.-Col. BAILEY for the relief of the Red River fleet by his engineering skill.

Adjourned.

The Second New-Jersey Regiment.

NEWARK, Sunday, June 5.

The Second New-Jersey Regiment arrived here at 4 o'clock P. M, their three years' term of service having expired. They were received by crowds of citizens. Mayor RUNYON delivered a patriotic speech, which was handsomely responded to by Col. BUCK, who stated that the thinned ranks of his regiment, which were reduced from over one thousand men to less than three hundred, testified to their patriotism and bravery, and that the so-called sacred soil of Virginia was now in reality rendered doubly sacred as the grave of patriots and heroes of the Republic. The Common Council and various organizations intended to receive the regiment, but failed to turn out. No particular reason is known, as the Daily Advertiser announced the regiment's departure from Camden and when expected here.

NATIONAL MEDICAL CONVENTION.—The committee of arrangements of the National Medical Convention met yesterday afternoon at Irving Hall, for the purpose of receiving the credentials of its members. Quite a number of delegates have already arrived from the different States. The session promises to be an interesting one. It will continue in session for three days. On Friday it proposes visiting the public institutions of the City. The Committee having charge of the matter consists of Drs. ANDERSON, GRISCOM, FINNELL, BULKLEY and others.

POSTSCRIPT.

TUESDAY, 4 O'CLOCK, A. M.

ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

THE BATTLE OF FRIDAY.

Disappearance of Ewell's Corps on Saturday Morning.

Warren Believed to Have Flanked the Rebel Left.

WASHINGTON, Monday, June 6.

The steamer S. R. Spaulding, which left the White House at 10 o'clock, yesterday morning, arrived here to-day.

Direct telegraphic communication has been established between the White House and Washington.

There were about 300 rebel prisoners at the White House when the steamer Spaulding left, and others were on their way in from the front. A considerable number of contrabands were in camp there. But few of our wounded had come in as yet.

Reinforcements for GRANT continue to arrive in large numbers. The Spaulding met several transports bound to the White House with troops.

On the morning of the 4th inst. Ewell, who was upon Lee's left, had entirely disappeared, leaving many infallible signs of hasty retreat. Blankets and knapsacks strewed the line of their march. Their right has been menaced or completely turned by WARREN. Nothing else could cause such a precipitated withdrawal.

The Fifth Corps were fighting in the neighborhood of Bethseda Church, the enemy still holding the Mechanicsville line along the north and south shores of the Chickahominy. We have lost considerably, but nothing seems to affect the troops, who cannot be appalled by the sight of blood nor intimidated by danger and death.

The Eighteenth Corps fought well, losing their full quota.

The Spaulding brought up 100 sick and disabled mules and horses. Several steamers were at the White House landing fresh horses for Gen. GRANT's army.

More than 700 of the 1,500 contrabands brought up last night by the steamer John Rice from White House Landing were sent to Freedman's village this morning by Lieut.-Col. GREENE, and provided with good quarters and food. Most of them were women, children and old men.

Dr. BRYAN, the New-York State Agent, is informed by Maj. GARRET, of the Sixty-ninth New-York, Regiment, that Col. JAMES P. MCMAHAN, of the One Hundred and Sixty-fourth New-York Volunteers, is a prisoner, and not wounded. A letter from the Army of the Potomac, dated 4th, says, Gen. WILSON, with his Division of Cavalry, returned from a destructive tour on Wednesday. The Sixth Corps at the time forming our extreme right, supported him. The railroad destroyed was the Virginia Central. It is reported to have been done so effectually that the rebels cannot repair it in some months.

Affairs on the Mississippi River.

MEMPHIS, Monday, June 6.

By the arrival of the steamer Arthur we have Vicksburgh advices to the evening of the 1st. The Arthur was fired into at Columbia, Ark., by a battery of nine guns—6 and 12-pounders. Seventeen shots took effect, raking her fore and aft. She was also riddled with musket-balls two miles below the battery. Two men were killed and one severely wounded. The Louisville came up and engaged the battery, but they took no notice of her, directing their fire upon the Arthur until she was out of range.

Three of the Marine Brigade boats were lying on the opposite shore, just below the battery. The steamers Henry Orms and James C. Watson passed down immediately after the Arthur passed, and received the full fire of the batteries, but got by without being disabled. It is reported that several thousand infantry are supporting the battery.

Gen. CANBY is still at Vicksburgh, engaged in reorganizing his forces.

Gen. SLOCUM's forces are actively engaged inland.

Brig.-Gen. MCARTHUR and Staff came on the Arthur en route to report to Gen. MCPHERSON.

Washington City Election.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Monday, June 6.

The municipal election to-day was a remarkably quiet one. All the bars, excepting those of the hotels, were closed during the day and night, by order of the military authorities.

RICHARD WALLACH was reelected Mayor by a large majority. Most of the Aldermen and Councilmen on the same ticket were elected. All the candidates professed to be Union men, either unconditional or independent.

LATER.

WALLACH's majority for Mayor is 971.

Return of the Pennsylvania Reserves.

HARRISBURGH, Penn., Monday, June 6.

The Pennsylvania Reserves were received today by Gov. CURTIN and handsomely entertained.

Turf Record.

THE GREAT DERBY RACE AT THE PATERSON MEETING TO-DAY.

By the arrival of the China at Halifax yesterday, we received the telegraphic result of the English Derby race at Epsom, which was published in our third edition. The full particulars of that event will be given as soon as our papers arrive. To-day its American namesake—The Great Jersey Derby will take place for the first time at the opening of the racing meeting of the Passaic County's Agricultural Society at Paterson, New-Jersey.

In our issue of yesterday we alluded to the fact that this stake was modeled on its English prototype, was confined to three-year old colts, and was a single dash of one mile and a half; and that in its first year of existence it had no less than thirty-two entries, which is an excellent beginning for an annual stake, which is destined to become as famous in future years as its English namesake.

At our last writing Capt. MOORE's Lexington colt was the first favorite, and he was backed at evens against Tipperary and Kentucky conjointly, and also against Norfolk and another thrown in. On Sunday, Norfolk receded in the betting, Tipperary taking his place and being in equal demand with Capt. MOORE's colt, whilst Kentucky has took the lead of Norfolk. At any rate, there will be many fluctuations before the hour of starting to-day, when at least ten, and perhaps twelve thoroughbred competitors will be found at the post.

The field will in all probability comprise the following: Norfolk, Tipperary, Capt. MOORE's Lexington colt Eagle, Charlotte F——, one of Mr. WATSON's four nominations, (possibly Two-bits,) Velvet, Lurline, Kentucky, and Mr. MORRIS' two colts. Of these, the last public performers at this present writing are Norfolk, Tipperary, Kentucky and Eagle. Norfolk, by his recent victory at St. Louis, leading the van, the only reason that can be assigned for his declination in the betting being a suspicion that he has "gone off" a little since his arrival North. Tipperary, who stayed with him and put him to his best comes next in public merit. Capt. MOORE's colt is entirely a dark horse, and the only reason why he should have obtained so much favor among betting men is the reports of private trials with Panic and others.

COMPLIMENTARY BENEFIT.—A grand complimentary benefit was given last evening at Stuyvesant Institute, to Mr. J. W. WHITNEY, a gentleman well and favorably known in the sporting circles of this City. At an early hour the hall was filled. After some good singing, and a jig dance, by MICKEY WARREN, Mr. HARRY HILL displayed his remarkable proficiences in the use of the Indian Clubs. Mr. GEORGE C. DORSON, the celebrated banjoist, then gave an exhibition of his skill in the use of that instrument, his performance was very excellent and was heartily applauded. Mr. MCMAHON, of Brooklyn, and several other professors of the manly art of self-defence, then put on the gloves and engaged in a friendly set-to, in the final one between Mr. J. W. WHITNEY and Mr. THOMAS CORNELL, both gentlemen showed such a perfect knowledge of the art and such command of themselves as to deserve and bring forth the strong and hearty plaudits of the audience. The affair was a perfect success.

CATARRH.

CURED BY DR. ROWE, OF NO. 32 WEST 24TH-ST., (Eight doors West of 5th-av.,) New-York.

Its Causes—Pernicious Effects on the System—Where Located—How Treated Heretofore—Diseases which it Produces—Fatal Consequences of Neglecting it.

Of all diseases there is none more prevalent, deleterious, and yet more neglected than Catarrh. Few realize the fatal consequences of neglecting it, and consequently are not cognizant of how many diseases to which it is indirectly...

It is truly surprising that of a disease so prevalent, and exercising such pernicious effects on the system, so little should be known by both professional and non-professional. It is much to be regretted that the Medical Faculty should have paid so little attent on to it, or otherwise much suffering, and undoubtedly many might have been saved from a premature grave. But, nevertheless, it is a fact that cannot be denied, hundreds, yes, thousands being living witnesses to this fact, and how many that are gone none can tell. In consequence of their total ignorance of it, and exerting themselves in no way to gain more information on the subject, hundreds of nostrums, in the shape of snuffs, have sprung up like mushrooms, as the panacea for the disease in all its stages; and worse than this, these very snuffs have been recommended by physicians. Not willing to admit their ignorance of the disease, the patient is dismissed when applying for aid with the answer that "Catarrh can never be cured." Try a little snuff, says one; a little fine salt and sugar, says another; snuff up a little cold water says a third. If these remedies are not prescribed, it is either pearlash or the effects of a cold, which will soon wear away. And how many there are that wear away before the cold does! Being a regular Physician myself, and at one time a general practitioner, nothing disrespectful is intended to the general practitioner as a class, for their services are but too little appreciated, it would be foreign to my object to wish to make the slightest imputation; but as a work like this, where the [illegible] and even lives of thousands are at stake, it is not only impossible to avoid, but absolutely necessary to criticise, even though it be harshly. It will be seen from this that really nothing that could be beneficial has been done. Consequently there are many that believe that the disease can never be cured; added to which, their having been told by those in whom they naturally placed confidence, that "Catarrh can never be cured," has tended to make them more positive in their opinions. It must be remembered by such that this is a progressive age. Science has made, and is making, gigantic strides. Many things that could not be done when they were boys, and which, had one hinted of being ultimately done, would have brought down the ridicule of those before whom he should have been so foolhardy as to venture the assertion, have been accomplished. The sciences of both medicine and surgery have not been behind hand, but have kept pace with the other branches of science. How many operations in by-gone times, now performed with facility and success, were looked on as not only impracticable, but absolutely impossible. Why, then, may I not ask, should not more have been learned of Catarrh, and an effectual method of treating is?

Catarrh, in many instances, is caused from a violent cold which has been neglected, thereby leaving the glands and membrane in an irritated and inflamed state—the discharge which is hawked up from the throat, or blown from the nose, and sometimes both, being the natural consequence of it. Again, it is produced from scarlet fever and measles, these diseases leaving the same effects as cold.

At its commencement its seat is in the mucous membrane of the nose, but to show how it exerts such a pernicious influence on the general system and extends itself to so many important organs, a short description of that membrane is requisite.

The naso-pulmonary mucous membrane commences at the edge of the lips and nostrils, proceeds through the nose and mouth to the throat, from whence it is continued throughout the whole length of the alimentary canal to the termination of the intestines, and also along the windpipe and its various divisions so far as the air-cells of the lungs, to which it affords a lining. From the nose the membrane extends through the tear-passage, until, under the name of conjunctiva, it is spread over the forepart of the eye-ball and inside the eye-lids.

Other offsets from the nose line the frontal maxillary, ethmoidal and sphenoidal sinuses, (small cavities situated in the bones bearing the same name.) A prolongation extends through the Eustacian tubes to line that passage and the tympanum, or middle ear.

Very many that have it in its incipient stages are not cognizant of it, thinking that they are suffering from a severe cold. To these a general description of the symptoms of it will be of advantage. It produces a feeling of uneasiness, heat, and stiffness of the nostrils, which are often closed on one or both sides, caused by the thickening of the membrane from inflammation; soon a thin, watery discharge commences, excoriating that part of the skin with which it comes in contact. If the disease is not checked then, the discharge soon becomes thick and purulent, of a greenish yellow color, sometimes tinged with blood, with an odor more or less disagreeable, and sometimes very offensive. The breath of the patient becomes so revoltingly offensive as to isolate him from society, and render him an object of disgust to himself. The discharge frequently drops down the throat, and has to be hawked up in order to obtain relief—the senses of smell and taste become greatly impaired, and sometimes entirely lost—a distressing headache makes its appearance as the frontal sinuses become involved, and neuralgic pain in the face and head, as soon as the other sinuses become affected. At night sleep is often interrupted, a sensation of dryness in the mouth and throat, thirst and feverishness generally being produced. In the morning a coated tongue and a disagreeable taste in the mouth are frequent, as also dizziness. Some persons become very drowsy, more especially during the day, after eating. After a time the memory is impaired, a restless, nervous feeling accompanying it—serious y affecting close application to study; in short, a general restlessness of the mind. Many are disposed to be costive. If inflammation extends through the tear-passage to the eye, and inflames that organ, it causes the tears to overflow upon the slightest irritation or exposure, producing what is generally called "weeping eye." If it extends through the eustachian tubes to the middle ear, the hearing becomes more or less impaired: if it extends down the throat, it gives rise to dyspepsia, bronchitis, and to consumption. The experience and investigation of the greatest savans in medical science has established the fact that in fully two-thirds of the cases of consumption it commences by inflammation and ulceration of the air passages. It must be remembered that the best and only cure of consumption is its prevention.

Procrastination is in this, as in other cases, dangerous. Many a disease becomes incurable from having been neglected too long. Humanly speaking, many that have died of consumption, which commenced as Catarrh, might be now living had their cases had proper attention at the commencement, or before it had gone too far. Diseases in children, grow so gradually that persons are not aware how much they have increased until they are made aware of it by their failing health and gradual decline. Then they see that something must be done. They have awakened at last to their condition, in many instances too late. The silent warnings they have not heeded; then they see their folly, and have to pay the penalty. It is customary with many—how often have I not heard them say it—my mother, or my father, or some friend had Catarrh, but it never injured their health. To them it did not seem to, but it must have to a certain extent, though not materially. Did it never occur to such that these persons, though their constitutions were so vigorous as to resist the effect of the disease, yet that it was liable at any time from any irritating cause to have assumed an aggravated form and to have terminated fatally? One question may be asked such. How do you know that you have the same constitution, or that you will be so fortunate? There are others, again, who will tell you: "It never troubles me much and don't appear to injure my health." It must be remembered that Catarrh, after its acute stage, apparently seems not to increase, but, insidious as its offspring—consumption—it is nevertheless growing worse. It is customary with children to imagine that they will "outgrow" it. Never was a greater mistake. On the contrary, it grows with the child.

Reference having been made to the various modes of treatment of the disease heretofore, it is only necessary to say that not one of them can have the slightest beneficial effect, but on the contrary, the most decidedly pernicious effects, with the exception of cold water, which only cleanses, possessing no curative influence on it. It neither does good nor harm, affording at the most but temporary relief. Experience has proved to me that snuffs most decidedly make the disease worse, as they increase the inflammation. The only thing that can be said in their favor is that they clear the nostrils when obstructed, which, however, soon fill again, caused by the inflammation they produce. Any man that reasons must see that they cannot exercise a curative influence. I would strongly advise any one to rather suffer the inconvenience than to pay so dearly for so short relief. It would be much better to snuff up a little tepid water when the nostrils are so obstructed as to inconvenience breathing, as it will be found to give relief and though really not benefiting the disease, yet will do no harm. In regard to snuffing up salt, and even camphor, which has been recommended by physicians, I can only say it is a barbarous idea, and one calculated to do much harm. I have known of cases where persons have lost their sense of smell entirely beyond recovery from this barbarous application. Many cases of polypus are caused from this harsh remedy, if remedy it can be called. I have seen cases where "Syrups" have been used to cleanse it from the blood, as is supposed. It is true there are many cases where it has a diffused itself over the system as to render medicines internally necessary to eradicate its injurious effects, but they must always be used in connection with local treatment, else it is like trying to stop a stream by damming it in the middle. There are many cases of Catarrh in which the disease can only be checked and prevented from growing worse, at the same time removing the disagreeable effects of it, but not eradicating it entirely from the system, while there are other apparently bad cases that can be entirely cured, and like all diseases, there are others that have gone too far for medical aid. I had once a most distressing case—that of a lady, the mother of five children, who had lost the roof of her mouth from the disease. Consequently her speech was so impaired that it was almost impossible to understand her even by the utmost trying. I never witnessed a more distressing scene than when I had to tell her nothing could be done for her. With tears in her eyes, she besought me to try and do something for her. "Oh!" said she, "to think that I cannot make my children understand me when I speak to them." Polypus in the nose is frequently caused from Catarrh. I was once consulted by a young lady, of about twenty years of age, who had been afflicted for many years with Catarrh though neither she nor her parents were aware that it was Catarrh. The disease had gradually grown worse, her throat becoming affected from the mucous falling into it. She had been under the care of several physicians, some of whom treated her for bronchitis, while others treated her for consumption. Gradually the disease increased until at last the nostrils became obstructed so as to render breathing through them impossible. Respiration gradually became more and more difficult by her mouth, until it got so that she could scarcely breathe, the polypus which had obstructed the nostrils having pressed on the soft palate and into the pharynx, causing the obstruction in respiration, as also deglutition. In this case, an operation would have been necessary to remove the polypus. Though the operation itself could have been performed successfully, she had been so reduced by the disease that she could not have lived through the operation. Feeling that to be the case, I advised the father and mother not to have it performed. She died in a few days afterward, having strangled. An exactly similar case, but one more fortunate, was that of a gentleman about 35, on whom I operated successfully. His was equally as bad a case, with the exception that his constitution, once a very vigorous one, had been able to resist the effects of the disease sufficiently to enable him to bear the operation. After the polypus was removed he was placed under treatment for Catarrh, and entirely cured.

Sons of Perfume.

Yes, well is my name from that language of old,
That Anacreon sung o'er his bright harps of gold,
When he sat amid Attica's roseate bowers,
With his cup held by Love, with his brow bound with flowers.

And ne'er breathed he sweeter perfume from their lips,
Than the breath that I give to Humanity's lips;
For my essence is drawn from the odorous cells
Where Nature, most fragrant and exquisite, dwells.

How the teeth are all purified, sweetened by me,
From discolor and fetor as ivory free!
How no matter the heat or the cold of the clime,
They will strengthen and whiten through sickness and time.

How I harden the gums! How I give to the last,
That beauty so longed for—the roseate cast
Cleopatra ne'er knew, nor the maids of Cashmere—
Only kept for America's belles by me here!

Thus delicious for man and for woman I shine;
Purest dentifrice known to the toileted shrine;
And my name, SOZODONT! from the grand Greek of old,
That Anacreon sung o'er his bright harps of gold!

Messrs. Geo. C. Hubbel & Co.:

GENTS:

Having used only two bottles of your "Golden Bitters," I can recommend them with the utmost confidence as a Tonic, and particularly for a change of diet and water. It is as well for ladies and children, giving them part of a wine-glass two or three times a day.

Yours respectfully,

GEO. C. BARKER.

For Coughs, Colds, Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, and other Pulmonary Affections, use Dr. Jayne's Expectorant. For many years this article has been the standard remedy, and thousands willingly testify to its virtue. Its effects are immediate and relief certain. All of Dr. D. Jayne & Sons' Family Medicines are sold by HARROLD, RISLEY & TOMPKINS, No. 141 Chambers-st., and No. 1 Hudson-st., and by druggists generally.

Public Speakers, Military Men and Singers, and all suffering from Irritation of the Throat and Hoarseness will be agreeably surprised at the almost immediate relief afforded by the use of Brown's Bronchial Troches. Their demulcent ingredients allay pulmonary irritation, and, after public speaking or singing, when the throat is wearied and weakened by too much exercise, their use will give renewed strength to the vocal organs.

We have Frequently heard Mothers say they would not be without Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP, from the birth of the child until it had finished with the teething siege, on any consideration whatever. It gives an infant, troubled with colic pains, quiet sleep, and its parents unbroken rest at night. 25 cents a bottle.

Housekeepers will Find that Burnett's Flavoring Extracts have all the delicacy of the fruits from which they are prepared. All druggists, grocers and country merchants should have them.

PROPOSALS FOR
$500,000
VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS' FAMILY AID FUND BONDS, NO. 9.

Sealed proposals will be received at the Comptroller's Office until Saturday, the 11th of June, 1864, at 2 o'clock P. M., when the same will be publicly opened, for the purchase of the whole or any part of the sum of Five Hundred Thousand Dollars of the "Volunteer Soldiers' Family Aid Fund Bonds, No. 9," authorized by an ordinance of the Corporation, passed May 26, 1864, and an act of the Legislature of the State of New-York, passed March 6, 1863.

The said bonds will bear interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, on the first day of May and November in each year, and the principal will be redeemed November 1, 1873.

The proposals will state the amount of bonds desired, and the price per one hundred dollars thereof, and the persons whose proposals are accepted will thereupon be required to deposit with the Chamberlain of the City (at the Broadway Bank) the sums awarded to them respectively.

On presenting to the Comptroller the receipts of the Chamberlain for such deposits, the parties will be entitled to receive bonds for equal amounts of the par value thereof, bearing interest from the dates of payments.

Each proposition should be sealed and indorsed "Proposals for Volunteer Soldiers' Family Aid Fund Bonds, No. 9," and inclosed in a second envelope, addressed to the Comptroller.

The right is reserved to reject any or all of the bids if the interests of the Corporation require it.

MANHATTAN COAL AND IRON COMPANY.

A. A. LEWIS, President. T. EVANS, Secretary.

The books for subscription are now opened at the office of Messrs. WOLFF & DIKE, No. 60 Wall-st., for a limited number of shares at $2 per share (no assessments) hereafter, par value $12 50. The property of this Company consists of some of the best coal lands in Ohio, situated on the line of the Cleveland and Pittsburgh Railroad, which, with the close proximity of the Ohio Canal, gives the mineral of this property easy and economical transportation by rail and water to Cleveland, Pittsburgh, and Cincinnati. The two openings now completed have yielded in a short time fifteen thousand tons of the best bituminous coal. There are four (4) distinct veins of coal of an average thickness of 3 feet, and with the exception of one vein, are all situated above the line of the railroad, and is screened directly from the mine into the cars of the Cleveland and Pittsburgh Railroad, an advantage possessed by few of our mines. The two veins of Black Band and Kidney, over which are underlying the whole of the estate, are now successfully worked near the premises, and are yielding from 35 to 40 per cent of good iron. Some of the most eminent geologists and mining engineers in the country estimate this property to contain 8,749,800 tons of marketable coal, selling now readily at wholesale at $6 per ton in market, deducting for mining, say $1 85, for transportation to market, via Cleveland and Pittsburgh Railroad $1 95, for contingent expenses 50c. per ton, leaves a nett profit of $1 70 per ton.

The facilities which the present openings and improvements afford, will, without much expense, allow the company to mine 250 tons per day.

CHICAGO AND GREAT EASTERN RAILWAY COMPANY.
SEVEN PER CENT.
FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS.

The Subscribers now offer for sale the remainder of the issue of Seven per cent. First Mortgage Bonds of the Chicago and Great Eastern Railway Company, appropriated to the construction of their road from Chicago to La Cresse, Indiana.

The rails have all been purchased for the completion of the entire line, much below the present market value, and are now going forward to Chicago. The work is rapidly progressing, and the Company expect to open the road for traffic early the ensuing Fall, forming a new and very short trunk line from Chicago to the Eastern markets.

The interest payable during construction has been provided, and is now on deposit with the Bankers of the Company. Apply to MEDICAL.

A TREATISE ON DISEASES OF THE SEXUAL SYSTEM, with an appendix, views on Mr. Syme's new method of treating stricture. By EDWARD H. DIXON, M.D. Ninth edition. Price $1.
EVERARDUS WARNER,
No. 2 Vesey-st., Astor House.

From the New-York Journal of Medicine and Collateral Sciences.

"It is written in a clear, nervous style, and is calculated, as we think, to do much good. The descriptions are accurately drawn, and the remedial measures judicious. The practitioner will find it abounding in valuable hints, and the general reader will come across many useful cautions and premonitory warnings."

From the Boston Medical and Surgical Journal.

Dr. Dixon has written much and well on various branches of surgery; his book shows a thorough acquaintance with modern practice; stricture, varicocele, hydrocele and fistula are particularly well treated of. Indeed, he has managed to secure attention to every page in this volume, an art that few medical writers possess.

"The author's acknowledged originality and thorough devotion to the rational principles of medicine, and his ingenuity under trying surgical circumstances, stamp it with more than ordinary interest."—London Lancet.

PRIVATE DISEASES CURED IN THE shortest possible time, by DR. WARD & CO., No. 50 Lispenard-st., near Broadway, without the use of mercury, loss of time or change of diet. Dr. WARD, from the hospitals of London, Paris and Edinburgh, is the discoverer of the only certain and reliable remedies for diseases of a private character. In 28 years' practice he has cured more cases of Secret Diseases and Wrong Treatment than all the other physicians in New-York. Can be cured in less time and at less expense than any other can or will, and those who have been robbed of their money and health, call; it will take but little money and time to restore you. If you have been unfortunate, call at once. By his special experience in this much neglected branch of medical science, he is enabled to guarantee a cure in the most complicated cases. Recent cases of Gonorrhœa or Syphilis cured in a few days, without change of diet or hindrance from business. Secondary Syphilis—the last vestige eradicated without the use of Mercury. Involuntary emissions stopped in a short time. Sufferers from impotency, or loss of sexual power, restored to full vigor in a few weeks, permanently and speedily cured by a new treatment. Persons at a distance failing to receive prompt treatment elsewhere, may get a permanent cure effected by writing a full diagnosis of their case, addressed to Dr. WARD, No. 61 Franklin-st. Call, send, or write.

$1,000 FORFEITED AND NO CHARGE UNLESS CURED.—Dr. Hunter's Red Drop cures venereal diseases when regular treatment and all other remedies fail; cures without dieting or restriction in the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours; cures without the dreadful consequent effects of mercury; but puts to use the peculiarly valuable property of annihilating the rank and poisonous taint that the blood is sure to absorb unless this remedy is used. This is what he claims for it; and what no other will accomplish. Its value in this respect has become so well known that gentlemen, in every department of medical knowledge, begin to appreciate it before hardly a week passes that he is not consulted by druggists, chemists and physicians in regard to some pitiful patient who has exhausted the whole field of the faculty, and still the disease will appear. This Sarsaparilla and cannot be obtained genuine anywhere but at the old office, No. 3 Division-st., New-York City, since 1836. Eight separate rooms and a private entrance. A ten cent bill will secure the Monitor of Health by return mail.

AFFLICTED RESTORED—IGNORANCE EXPOSED—FALLACIES UNMASKED.—Highly important to both sexes, married or single, in health or disease. Dr. LARMONT'S Paris London and New-York Medical Adviser and Marriage Guide, 150th edition, 400 pages, nearly 100 anatomical illustrations, on the nature, liability, Affections of the Bladder and Kidneys, Sexual Diseases, European hospital practice, the Author's unequaled Paris and London treatment, &c. All should purchase this original work of the publisher, L. WARNER, 41 Vesey-st., for it consults the physician, 173 Broadway, up stairs, New York, from 10 A. M. to 5 P. M. We concur with other papers in recommending Dr. Larmont and his work."—Courrier des Etats Unis, Germandie Review, Dispatch, Staats Zeitung, Atlas, Medical Review.

A PHYSIOLOGICAL VIEW OF MARRIAGE—Containing nearly 300 pages, and 150 fine plates and engravings of the anatomy of the sexual organs, in a state of health and disease, with a treatise on self-abuse, its deplorable consequences upon the mind and body, with the author's plan of treatment—the only rational and successful mode of cure, as shown by the reports of cases created. A truthful adviser to the married and those contemplating marriage, who entertain doubts of their physical condition. Sent, free of postage, to any address on receipt of 25 cents, in specie or postage-stamps. Address Dr. LA CROIX, No. 31 Maiden-lane, Albany, N. Y.

MANHOOD AND THE VIGOR OF YOUTH regained in three days by Dr. POWERS' ESSENCE OF LIFE. This wonderful agent restores manhood to the most shattered constitution, radically curing Seminal Weakness, Sexual Debility, and Impediments to marriage generally; Nervousness, Mental and Physical Incapacity, resulting from self-abuse, &c. The time required to cure the most inveterate case in one week. Failure is impossible. This life-saving remedy should be taken by all about to marry, as its effects are permanent. Young man, are you subject to that soul and body destroying disease, secret habits? Dr. POWERS' invigorating Essence is a never-failing cure. Sold by WALTER F. POWERS, M. D., No. 61 Franklin-st., between Broadway and Elm-st., New-York.

IMPORTANT TO THE MARRIED AND THOSE ABOUT TO BE MARRIED.—Dr. A. M. MAURICEAU, Professor of Diseases of Women, whose valuable book entitled "THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION," strictly intended for those whose health or circumstances forbid a too rapid increase of family, with full instructions for restoring the monthly sickness. Price $1. Sold at his office, No. 130 Liberty-st., New-York; or can be sent by mail, free of postage, to any part of the United States and Canada, by inclosing $1, and addressing Box No. 1,224 New-York City Post-office, by W. A. WARNER, at No. 1 Vesey-st., (Astor House,) No. 13 Ann-st. and No. 13 Court-st., Boston.

ADVICE TO MARRIED OR SINGLE LADIES, who require a safe and certain remedy for removing obstructions, from whatever cause. Can rely upon the celebrated INFALLIBLE FRENCH FEMALE MONTHLY PILLS. No. 1, price $1 a box, to restore the monthly sickness in forty-eight hours, if of short standing; but obstinate cases, of long standing, may require No. 2, which are four degrees stronger than No. 1, and can never fail, are safe and healthy, price $5 a box. Sold at No. 127½ Liberty-st., or sent by mail, with full instructions, by addressing Box No. 2,399 N. Y. Post-office.

DR. POWERS' PERIODICAL DROPS are designed for both married and single ladies, and are the very best thing known for the purpose, as they will bring on the monthly sickness in case of obstruction from any cause, and after all other remedies of the kind have been tried in vain. Expressly for obstinate cases. Warranted as represented in every respect, or the price will be refunded. ☞ Beware of imitations! Purchase directly of Dr. POWERS, 61 Franklin-st. N. Y.

GROCERIES & PROVISIONS.

VALUABLE INFORMATION.

The discoverer, for the sum of twenty-five dollars, will impart to parties interested a secret by which an article of cream tartar can be made, the cost of which will not exceed twelve cents per pound; the strength, color and baking properties of which are equal to pure cream tartar. The materials can be readily procured and quickly prepared. It is something entirely new, and to coffee and spice dealers, wholesale grocers, wholesale druggists, and the trade generally, the secret is one that can be made to pay largely.

THE BATTLE OF FRIDAY.

I am about to narrate an incident which will make a draft on the faith of the reader even greater than did the assertion that portions of our line held their position within fifty yards of the rebel works—and that is, that one portion of our line retained all day a position within fifteen yards of the rebel works. This heroic band was the brigade of Col. McKEAN, a brigade of GIBBON' division of HANCOCK'S corps, and numbering about eight hundred men. The conduct of these eight hundred is as splendid a stroke of heroism as ever lit up the story of "the glory we call Greece and the grandeur we call Rome." Through the live-long day these men held their line, within fifteen yards of the enemy, and all his force could not dislodge them. Repeatedly, during the day the rebels form double columns of attack to come over the work and assail them, and the officers could be heard encouraging their troops by telling them "there are only four or five hundred of them—come on." But the moment the rebels showed themselves above their parapet a line of fire flashed out from behind the earthen mound where those eight hundred heroes stood in a new Thermopylæ, and many a rebel threw up his arms and fell prone under their swift avenging bullets.

The sequel of this bit of history is as curious as the deed itself—for while the rebels dared not venture out to assail McKEAN'S men, neither could he nor his command recede from the perilous position. He could not get back to us—we could not go forward to him. In this dilemma the ingenious device was hit upon of running a "sap," or zig-zag trench, up from our line to his. In this way a working party were able to dig their way up to where they lay, begrimed with powder and worn down with fatigue, and a few hours ago they were brought safely away. "All that were left of them, left of eight hundred!" But McKEAN, their gallant leader, he came not away alive. Since eleven in the morning he had lain behind the bulwark his valor defended—a corpse. While standing up preparing to resist a rebel assault, he fell, pierced by the bullet of a sharp-shooter, and after living for an hour or two in an agonizing death-in-life, begging his staff officers to put an end to his misery, his heroic soul forsook the turmoil of this weary, warring world.

There were other scenes along those lines drawn so close up to the enemy not so grave, and others of a grim kind of jollity. For example, a man would sing out from behind our breastworks the signal of attack, "Forward, guide centre," whereupon the rebels plainly hearing all that was said, would start up from behind their parapet, and our men, just peering above their pits, and "drawing a bead" on the uprising rebels, would bring many a one down with a bloody gist, dispatched with unerring aim. Or, again, one of the rebels calling a parley, would cry out: "Yanks, ain't it about your time to cook coffee?" "Yes," replies Yank. "Then," rejoins Mr. Rebel, "if you won't shoot while I make my johny-cake, I won't shoot while you make your coffee." Whereupon the culinary truce was observed with scrupulous fidelity. It is in such ways that grim-visaged war, of a time, smoothes his wrinkled face.

A REBEL NIGHT ATTACK.

The hours of afternoon passed away with no more of action than is indicated in the previous recital; 5 o'clock, the favorite rebel hour of attack, had gone by, and it seemed that the war-work of the day was over. Toward sunset, the writer rode up to HANCOCK'S front, to learn closer at hand the details of the morning attack at this point. (But a parenthesis here; "ride" is hardly the work to indicate the mode of approach to these hot fronts. He who ventured up was speedily admonished by whizzing missiles from sharp-eyed rebel tirailleurs of the prudence of dismounting and making his way up as modestly as might be, whether on foot, or, still better, crawling on all fours.) It must have been nearly 8 o'clock, for a long Virginia twilight was fading clean out, when from behind the rebel works words of command were audible, indicating an intention of immediate attack. In a moment the rebel line of battle emerged, and came down with a fierce yell on the front of BARLOW'S and GIBBONS' Division and the left of WRIGHT'S Corps. It was these very troops that in the morning had gone up through the Inferno of rebel fire, and stormed and carried, for a time, their works, and it was with a savage joy they saw the moment come to pay the rebels back. It will give you a conception of the fearful odds at which this army works in these constant demands imposed upon it of assaulting the enemy's works, when I say that in the few opportunities the rebels have given us of receiving their attack on our works, each man feels himself equal to three, and never asks any better than that the rebels should just come on. Our men had now this sweet revenge. Though twilight had deepened into night, the approaching rebel line defined itself sharply athwart the horizon as it came over the crest, and as it did so, it was met by volley after volley of musketry and a well directed artillery fire, under which it shook and staggered, but closing up the gaps, still rushed forward. Portions of the line got up to our works, and at places the flash of the rebel sides came over our parapets. A few even got upon our breastworks; but they either fell dead on the outside, or were dragged inside as prisoners. Some of these have just been brought into Gen. HANCOCK'S tent. They prove to be North Carolinians; say they are BEAUREGARD'S troops; that they were last at the battle of Olustee, Florida, and that they were brought up to LEE'S army but a few days ago. This is an additional proof of a fact of which we have just had much evidence; that is, that LEE has to-day been fighting his reinforcements. We have taken to-day men from BRECKINRIDGE'S command, from BUCKNER'S, from BEAUREGARD'S, from North Carolina, from the defences of Savannah. And that, somehow or other, and in spite of the supposed depletion of the rebel army, LEE has been able to get together a still formidable force, we have to-day had the evidence of demonstration. Everywhere he has shown a development of line equal to our own, and though we have made the most vigorous efforts all along his front to break through, we have nowhere succeeded.

The repulse of the rebels in their night attack both on the front of HANCOCK and of WRIGHT was most complete, and whatever may have been the purpose of LEE in this bold stroke, it was signally foiled.

XIV.

CHICKAHOMINY IN HISTORY.

Notwithstanding that the position of our own line would localize the action of to-day as the battle of Cold Harbor, I have called it the battle of the Chickahominy, for the double reason that this name marks the formation of the rebel line, which we assailed; and further, because the supreme object of to-day's action was to force the passage of that stream. In view of the failure to make good this purpose, the thought of the army and of the country will naturally be directed to the future moves on the great chess-board. It is a fact of which you may not have thought, that Lieut.-Gen. GRANT, in his advance on Richmond, has crossed every line of operations that has ever been planned with Richmond as the objective. He has adopted not; he has bisected all. He is at present on the line of McCLELLAN'S peninsular campaign; but will he remain on it? May he not swing across that too? It would certainly be in the line of his mode of action to do so. But such considerations belong to an order of speculation in which extreme delicacy is an obligation of duty imposed upon every writer here. Accordingly, let the action of to-day pass into history to hold such relation with the whole campaign as the future may determine.

THE EIGHTEENTH ARMY CORPS.

The Battle of Wednesday—Gen. Smith's Operations—The Losses—Another Flank Movement.

From Our Special Correspondent.

HEADQUARTERS EIGHTEENTH ARMY CORPS, Thursday, June 2, 1864—8 A. M.

The Eighteenth Corps left White House late on Tuesday afternoon, under orders to march for Newcastle, twelve miles distant in a northwesterly direction, on the Pamunky. The position of the Army of the Potomac then was as follows: The left of the Fifth Corps was on the Shady Grove road, about three miles south of Totopotamoy Creek, and the Ninth Corps was on the right of the Fifth. The Second and Sixth Corps were in line on the road from Hanover Court-house to Cold Harbor, and about six miles south of the Court-house. Taking into account these facts as to position, the order to move to Newcastle with the Eighteenth Corps seemed inexplicable, but the command was peremptory and was carried out. By yesterday morning all the troops had reached Newcastle, when further orders reached Gen. SMITH, commanding him to retrace his steps to New-Cold Harbor, the word Newcastle in his first orders being a clerical error. This mistake gave the Eighteenth Corps an extra march of about fifteen miles, but the men trudged along bravely, arriving at Cold Harbor about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The Sixth Corps, (Major-Gen. WRIGHT,) was already there awaiting the arrival and formation of the Eighteenth to begin an attack upon the rebels, who were found there in full force. The fight was immediately opened and raged hotly all the afternoon, the brunt of the battle falling on the Eighteenth Corps. The men fought with great gallantry, and notwithstanding a stout resistance, had succeeded by nightfall in driving the enemy three-quarters of a mile, dislodging them from their rifle-pits, and holding all the ground thus obtained. Several charges were made on both sides.

RICKETT'S division of the Sixth Corps pushed the enemy from a line of hastily constructed rifle-pits, taking 300 prisoners.

A large number of prisoners were also taken by a gallant charge of BARTON'S brigade, TURNER'S division of the Eighteenth Corps.

Our losses were severe. Rough estimates place them at 800 killed and wounded in both corps.

Gen. GRANT'S design in making the attack, yesterday afternoon, seems to have been to keep the enemy engaged on his extreme left while he executes still another of his masterly flank movements. Even as I write by the roadside the country for miles around is hidden by the blinding dust raised by the marching of the Second Corps (HANCOCK,) from our extreme right to take position on the left of the Sixth Corps which is now, as I have already stated, on the extreme left. The Sixth then is the pivotal point upon which the entire army will swing rearward and to the front again, precisely reversing the position of the various corps as held day before yesterday, bringing the Sixth to the extreme right and the Second to the extreme left. This changing front in the face of the enemy, heretofore considered the most perilous of military movements, GRANT seems to carry on with perfect impunity. The present movements bids fair to be as successful as the others which have resulted in turning LEE'S army and bringing the Army of the Potomac again nearly up to the Chickahominy, about six miles from Richmond. Further Particulars of Wednesday's Fight—The Severity of the Battle—The Gallant Charge of Drake's and Barton's Brigades.

From Our Special Correspondent.

ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Thursday, June 2, 1864.

The battle on the left wing of the army at Cold Harbor, on Wednesday, in which the Sixth and Eighteenth Corps were engaged, was far more severe than I supposed when I wrote yesterday. Our losses in killed and wounded foot up 2,000, being about equally divided between both corps. The fight began at 4½ o'clock in the afternoon, with sharp artillery firing. WRIGHT'S corps (the Sixth) was on the extreme left, having marched up on the Hanover Court-house Road. The Eighteenth Corps (SMITH'S) reached the battle-field and "went in," after a wearying march of twenty-five miles from Newcastle over the dustiest of roads, without having had time to refresh themselves with coffee. The Sixth Corps was formed in four lines of battle under cover of woods, the left flank being protected with artillery. The Eighteenth Corps was spread out in a single line, connecting with the Sixth, with DEVEN'S division on the left, BROOKS' in the centre, and MARTINDALE'S on the right, and in front of our line of battle was a plowed field, 1,250 yards, or about two-thirds of a mile in width, beyond which, in a strip of pine forest, the enemy was in strong force behind rifle-pits. The order was given to assault this line and carry it. To accomplish such a thing a charge was necessary across this field. Gen. SMITH ordered the charge to be made by Col. DRAKE'S brigade, supported by Col. BARTON'S, both of DEVEN'S division. The order was gallantly obeyed. DRAKE urged his troops across at double quick, and they did not waver, although shocking gaps were made in the line by the heavy cross-fire of the enemy's artillery. On gaining the edge of the woods, the rebel infantry were found to have fallen back a hundred yards to their rifle-pits, which were strongly protected by slashings and entanglements. The survivors of this desperate charge found themselves unable to cope with the force in front of them. DRAKE, their gallant leader, had fallen, mortally wounded. Col. MCCONIHE, of the One Hundred and Sixty-ninth New-York, was shot dead. Lieut.-Col. ALDEN, of the same regiment, was wounded, and there were symptoms of breaking and coming back again apparent. BARTON'S brigade here threw itself into the breach. Emerging from the woods on our side of the field in as straight a line as though formed for dress parade, the word was given to "charge" at double quick. The men went forward splendidly, preserving their alignment perfectly as they skipped over the furrowed ground, closing up the vacancies made by the sweeping cross-fire, gaining the woods, opening their ranks for the partially exhausted fellows of DRAKE'S brigade to pass rearward, and with a fierce hurrah, dashing unshrinkingly into the rifle-pits over entanglements and pitfalls, taking two hundred and fifty prisoners. These prisoners were sent to the Sixth Corps for safe keeping. As they passed me going to the rear, I heard one of them say significantly, "We always attacked during McCLELLAN'S time, now you Yankees do that altogether." Gen. RICKETTS' division of the Sixth Corps, on the left of DAVEN'S, also rushed into the line thus brilliantly carried, and aided in holding it, sending several hundred prisoners to the rear.

The enemy still kept his position on the right of our line, and poured a destructive musketry fire on our troops in the pits. An effort was made to dislodge him. Gen. SMITH ordered forward Col. HENRY'S brigade of BROOKS' division, Eighteenth Corps. HENRY also made a gallant charge upon the enemy's lines and carried them. The struggle was short and severe. The brave fellows, however, could not hold what their valor had won. A strong redoubt behind the rifle pits, which our men had taken, commanded them perfectly. HENRY was forced to come back. As he retired the enemy charged to the edge of the woods, delivering a heavy musketry fire which marvelously spared Gen. SMITH and his staff. Two horses in the group near the General were struck by the minie balls.

During the movement, Gen. MARTINDALE'S Division of two brigades, excepting two regiments which were temporarily detached for service with Gen. WRIGHT, held the right. While HENRY was in the pits, MARTINDALE was ordered to sweep down into the rear and support him. Darkness supervened before the necessary disposition of the troops could be made, and the order was countermanded. There was little firing during the night. All along the line of our works the Pioneer Corps were engaged in the ghastly work of interring the slain. The rebels left many hundred dead and wounded in our lines.

AFTERNOON.—There has been no general engagement during the day. An attack was ordered for 5 o'clock this afternoon, but a soaking rain set in early and the order was changed. To-morrow, at 4 o'clock, a general engagement will begin.

During the night the enemy succeeded in occupying a position on our right and front in some force with infantry, and have kept up an annoying enfilading fire upon the men in the rifle-pits. At one time we were losing at the rate of a man a minute. I am writing this in the hospital of the Eighteenth Corps. Around me are hundreds of wounded in every stage of mutilation. Some are protected from the rain by shelter-tents, others have nothing over them but arbors of green boughs. The rain is not unpleasant to these poor sufferers. On the contrary, it refreshes them in their fevered condition.

Among the wounded this morning are: Col. BARTON, commanding Second Brigade of DEVEN'S division, painful wound in thigh. The ball first struck his watch and glanced therefrom. Capt. MILLER, ankle, severe; Adjt. JAS. TAYLOR, in arm, slightly; First Lieut. JAS. A. BARRATT, in spine, severely; Second Lieut. LIPPINCOTT, side, severely—all of the Forty-eighth New-York. First Lieut. A. H. INGRAHAM and Sergeant-Major SMITH, of the same regiment, were killed. Lieut.-Col. MARSHALL, of the Fortieth Massachusetts, is also killed.

EIGHT P. M.—The Fifth Corps, (Gen. WARREN.) on the extreme right of the army, is using artillery briskly now. Gen. BURNSIDE'S corps, (which was on the right this morning,) was ordered to move in WARREN'S rear. The enemy discovered the movement and made an attack. The result I have no means of knowing at this time. H. J. W.

The Operations of Our Cavalry.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

NEAR COLD HARBOR, Friday, June 3.

During the last two weeks, our Cavalry Corps has had some of the most severe fighting that branch of the service has experienced during the war, and while the results have been great, our losses have been correspondingly large. Among the casualties of the last few days are the following: Col. Gregg, commanding a brigade in Second Divison, killed; Lieut.-Col. Preston, First Vermont, killed; Capt. Wm. M. Brevoort, First Michigan Cavalry, First Division, killed; Sergt.-Maj. Smith, First Michigan Cavalry, mortally wounded; Capt. Geo. E. Maxwell, First Michigan Cavalry, lost his left arm; Lieut. Ingersoll, Company F, same regiment, wounded; Capt. Wm. M. Heazlitt, same regiment, wounded in arm; Maj. Pauldi, same regiment, wounded in chest. This regiment, since the 6th ult., has had one hundred and thirty-two men killed and wounded. Lieut. Jas. Chickering, Gen. Custer's Staff, wounded in hip; Lieut. Ed. Granger, of same staff, slightly wounded. E. A. PAUL.

OUR ARMY ADVANCING ON MARIETTA.

News to 6 P. M. of Sunday—Repulse of Rebe Attacks—Hancock's Lines Within Forty Rods of the Rebel Works—Another Flank Movement by Sherman—Our Army Moving on Marietta.

[OFFICIAL.]

WASHINGTON, June 6—7 P. M.

Maj.-Gen. Dix:

We have dispatches from Gen. GRANT'S headquarters down to 6 o'clock last evening, which state that there had been no fighting during the day. The enemy made an attack on Saturday night upon HANCOCK, WRIGHT and SMITH, but were everywhere repulsed. HANCOCK'S lines are brought within forty yards of the rebel works. The rebels were very busy Saturday constructing intrenchments on the west side of the Chickahominy, at Bottom Bridge, and toward evening threw a party across to the east side.

A dispatch from Gen. SHERMAN, dated yesterday afternoon, June 5, 3:30 o'clock, at Allatoona Creek, states that "the enemy, discovering us moving round his right flank, abandoned his position last night, and marched off. Gen. MCPHERSON is moving to-day for Ackworth. Gen. THOMAS is on the direct Marietta road, and SCHOFIELD on his right. It has been raining hard for three days, and the roads are heavy. An examination of the enemy's abandoned line of works here shows an immense line of works, which I have turned with less loss to ourselves than we have inflicted upon them." The army supplies of forage and provisions are ample.

EDWIN M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

News from General Grant up to Yesterday—No More Fighting—Important Movements Going on.

[OFFICIAL.]

WASHINGTON, June 6, 1864—10 o'clock, P. M.

To Maj.-Gen Dix:

Dispatches have been received from Gen. GRANT'S headquarters to-day, but they report only certain changes in the disposition of corps and contemplated operations. They state that "everything is going on well."

The Chief Quartermaster of the army reports, from a personal inspection of the depot at White House, that it is in a most efficient state, all needful supplies are on hand, and wagons easily transport them to the army. The wounded are being brought in, and transports are not delayed a moment.

A dispatch from Gen. SHERMAN, dated 12 o'clock noon, to-day, at Ackworth, says: "I am now on the railroad at Ackworth Station, and have full possession forward to within six miles of Marietta. All well."

There is no other military intelligence to-day.

EDWIN M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

The Battle of Friday.

WASHINGTON, Monday, June 6.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Saturday, June 4, 8 A. M.

Our cavalry was engaged all day yesterday in the vicinity of Howe's Store. The first attack was made on HAMPTON'S command, and which was badly defeated with loss. We afterward attacked HILL'S left on the Totopotamoy River, with the Second New-York, and drove one brigade out of their works, and held the place an hour. We then withdrew. We now hold Howe's Store.

Gen. WILSON bivouacked last night between Bethesda Church and the Pamunky River, and has a strong position. Our loss was not heavy.

The loss in yesterday's engagements was more severe than at first reported.

To-day the army has rested, and nothing but artillery duelling has occurred. In the fight yesterday, BURKENHEADEN occupied the right, BREWSTERRARD next, LONGSTREET'S corps the centre, and EWELL on the left, while HILL'S corps was held in reserve. Their artillery fire was good at some points, two of our caissons being exploded by their shells, and a number of men and horses killed and wounded at each. The wounded are being sent off as rapidly as possible.
